Nina Marshall named Woman of the Year

By Shirley Pritchett

CHARLESTON — Two-outstanding community women were honored Thursday night during the 12th Annual Woman of the Year event at the high school, sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Selected Woman of the Year for 1977-78 were Mrs. Nina Marie Marshall. Sharing honors with Mrs. Marshall as the BPW Woman of the Year was Mrs. Bernice Stewart. Each honoree received an arm bouquet of yellow roses and an engraved silver tray.

Mrs. Marshall, chosen by out-of-town judges on the basis of qualifications submitted by other Charleston organizations was introduced by Mrs. Dorothy E. Ledbetter, vice president of the local club and general chairman of the banquet who described her as an activist of many things good and worthwhile in her community, church and her home.

Cited for her devotion to her family, her love for the aged, particularly those who have no immediate families, and the sick were also noted. "She remembers those persons on a birthday or special occasion with a gift, bnouquet of flowers, or even a invitation to her home for a meal, complete with birthday cake, with her own family". Mrs. Ledbetter commented.

Wife of Herbert Marshall and the mother of five children, Mrs. Marshall has been active in an unlimited number of school activities, including band boosters, room mother, Girl Scouts, and Boy Scouts.

For many years she has served as neighborhood volunteer for the Cancer Society and the Multiple Sclerosis Socie-

Change in flood law won't affect area suit

The change in the flood insurance program signed into law Wednesday by President Jimmy Carter will have "no drastic effect" on the legal challenge being brought by those communities fighting the program.

That's the word from Terry Keeling, president of the Texas Landowners Rights Association and member of the board of directors of the Food Insurance Litigation Coalition.

The coalition expects to have the challenge before the Supreme Court by early next year.

Sikeston and Cape Girardeau are among the communities that have joined the landowners association in the fight.

Under the new law, residents in communities not in the flood insurance program can still obtain conventional loans through banks. Previously, the federal government had the power to halt loans in those communities which refused to join.

The legislation, in the form of an amendment to the national housing and community development act, was spon-

Farm worker crushed

BERTRAND -- A farm worker, Willie James Reynolds, 46, was killed about 10:30 a.m. today when a truckbed fell on him at the A. M. Wilson Farm on Route CC approximately four miles west of Bertrand.

Reynolds reportedly was working on the dump bed of a farm truck when the trailer fell, crushing him between the bed and truck frame.

Complete details were not available this morning.

The body was taken to McMikle Funeral Home in East Prairie.

Kenny Rogers gives his stallion to CP

By Jill S. Corti

Kenny Rogers, one of the nation's leading solo performers and 25th annual Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo star, has donated his grey, seven-year-old Arabian stallion, Borraabby, to the Scott-Mississippi- New Madrid Counties Cerebral Palsy Affiliate.

The gift of the stallion was announced at 2 p.m. today at a joint press conference held by the Sikeston Jaycees and the Cerebral Palsy affiliate.

CP officials also announced that the new CP center to be constructed in Sikeston will be erected in Rogers' name.

On Aug. 13 of rodeo week, Rogers told the local Jaycees at a luncheon that he was sincerely interested in donating the community his Arabian stallion. Since that time, the Sikeston Jaycees have been working "almost weekly" with Rogers and his management team in making arrangements for this contribution from the recording artist to the Sikeston community.

After much deliberation, it became apparent both to the Sikeston Jaycees and to Rogers, that the need for a new cerebral palsy center in Sikeston was of high priority.

Following discussions between members of the Sikeston Jaycees and the recording artist in Nashville, prior to the Country Music Association Awards Monday, and again through telephone conversations on Wednesday, the final decision was made.

Borraabby, who was sired by the internationally renowned Naborr, stand 15.1 hands and is now stabled at the Hallmark Farms in Middleton, Calif.

Foled by Aabby in Scottsdale, Ariz., on May 7, 1970, Borraabby was initially owned by recording artist John Davidson, who transferred ownership to Rogers in August of 1972.

The horse is registered under number 338780 with the Arabian Horse Registry of America. He has been shown in the Western Pleasure Class.

Naborr, who sired the horse, was bred in Russia and imported into the United States by the late Ann McCormick, owner of the International Harvester Equipment Co. At her death, Naborr was auctioned off for $150,000. Of his offspring in the United States, 68 per cent have won championships.

"In all likelihood, The Arabian Stallion will be transported to Sikeston for sale at a private treaty or auction. The value of the animal has not been determined," Jaycee officials said.

County Court to make building decision Monday

BENTON — C. R. "Buddy" Waters, an engineer with Waters and Associates and Scott County Surveyor, presented sample plans for a new Scott County Magistrate Court building to the Scott County Court Thursday.

Waters told the court that the sample plans are for a single story court building with 4500 feet of floor space, with an estimated cost in the neighborhood of $180,000. The building can be placed on the lot west of the present County Courthouse, which the county bought in April, he said.

Placing the building on the 55 feet by 108 feet lot would require removing the present building. Waters said it was his opinion that the older building should be removed because an adition to the present building would be too expensive.

Waters said the cost of a two-story addition would be approximately $27,000 more if both floors had 2,250 feet of floor space, with a total area equal to that of the single-story building.

County court members told Waters they expected to have a decision by Monday as to where they wish to build the new court building.

In expressing their opinions, Judge Eldon Ziegenhorn, said he cannot impagine an old building remaining next to the new court house; Judge Melvin Glueck said he felt the cost would be cheaper by utilizing the older building with a two-story addition and wanted to check with another engineer and if he found that it would be cheaper to build the one story building he would be in favor of removing the older structure; and Judge Loule Hirschowitz has been maintaining that the older building

FREEDOM IN OUR HANDS

The strength of the United States over the more 'han 200 years of our nation's existence has been its faithful commitment to the belief in the freedom of the individual. Our founding fathers provided us with a system which has fostered individual rights and permitted maximum opportunity for all to participate in the governmental process.

Making that system work is the responsibility of each of us as citizens. The spirit of the Washington, Jefferson, Adamses and Franklins must be no less strong today. Every American has a stake in the successful administration of the nation's laws and in retaining the rights provided us under the Constitution.

Each of us must make a personal commitment to make full use of the rights and obligations of living in a free society. If the democratic process is to function effectively— and to prevail — we must all play a part in it. That extends beyond taking advantage of our privilege to vote. If we feel strongly about a cause, we must speak out and work on behalf of our belief.

We can be encouraged by what seems to be renewed interest in fully participating in the political process. Increasingly, citizens are writing, calling and visiting with their elected representatives. Increasingly, they are actively working for causes in which they believe.

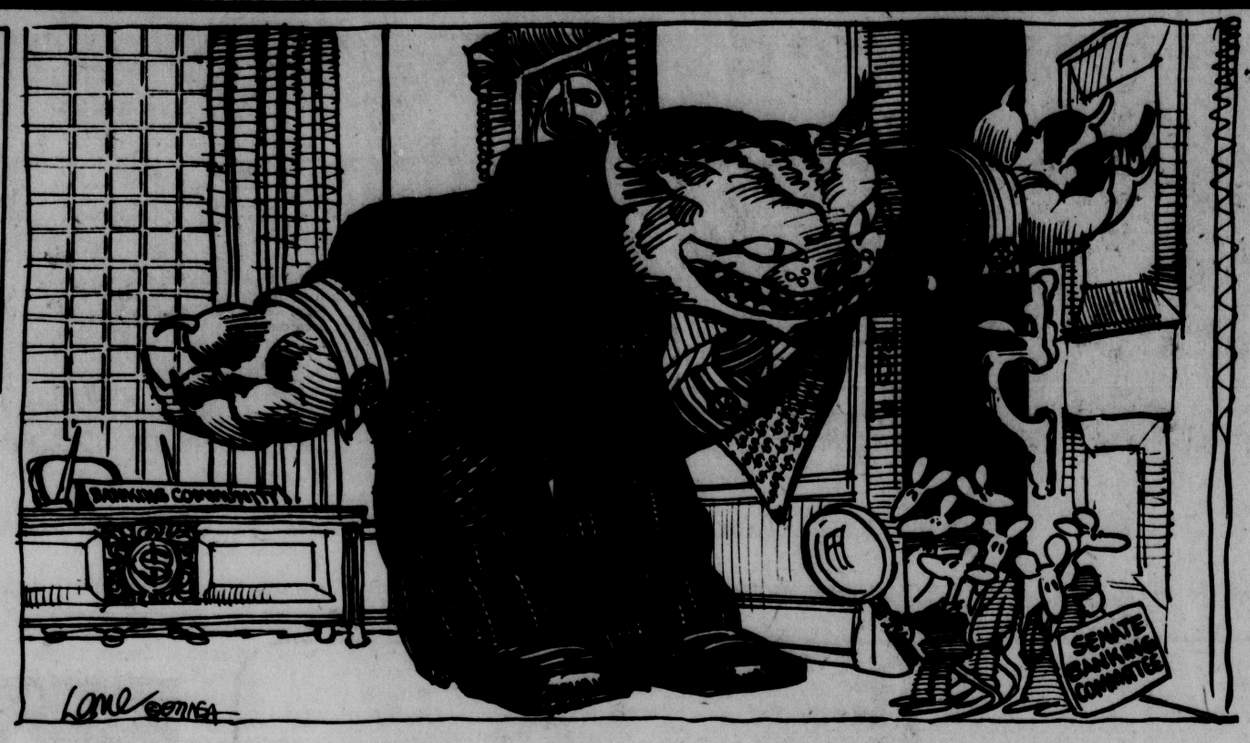

The late Robert Maynard Hutchins, shortly before leaving his post as president of the University of Chicago, offered a message that sums up the American ideal: "How is the educated man to show the fruits of hiseducation in times like these? He must not acquiesce in injustice, nor turn his back on it, when he sees it happening. He must cling fast to his faith in freedom. He must insist that freedom is the chief glory of mankind, and that to repress it is to repress the human spirit itself."

TRUTH IN MILEAGE

Very few new car buyers have been getting that "35 country, 23 city" or whatever the official gasoline mileage figures are for a particular automobile. Some have been so upset by the discrepancy between advertised and actual performance that they have stormed into dealers asking, "How come?"

Storm no more. The Environmental Protection Agency, which administers the mileage tests, says it is going to change the tests beginning with the 1979 model year so they more accurately reflect the mileage motorists actually get on the road.

COUNTY BOND ISSUE MAY BE THE ANSWER

As much as we, and thousands of others, dislike the idea it is becoming increasingly evident that unless unexpected maoney comes to Monroe County, we'll be forced to issue county bonds for construction of bridges, culverts and drainage tubes.

With its over 800 miles of streams Monroe County has more miles of flowing water and more bridges, than any county in Missouri, and probably may be first or close to the top of any county in the nation.

County road officials plan accurate count of the stream-spanning or drainage structures that sorely need to be replaced with heavier and wider ones to carry the weighty and more numerous traffic of today.

They already know that there are hundreds of them, and they also know there isn't enough money now, nor will there be in the forseeable future, to replace any but a very few.

They were built in most cases in the horse and buggy days, or even after that, when lighter vehicles, machinery and loads were the rule.

Many are unsafe for school buses and other weighty vehicles such as commercial or farm trucks.

Our many miles of water are a blessing, but as all of us realize now, there are also some disadvantages. Replacements needs and costs are the chief ones.

VILLAGE LAW

Fighting litter is a worthy cause, and laws against littering are not uncommon.

It's the way that the village of Ocean Beach on New York's Fire Island went about it that shows how silly the law can become. All those frustrations caused by scattered paper wrappers for fast foods led to an ordinance against eating anything in public but ice cream cones. (Presumable nobody is allowed a paper napkin with a cone.)

Arrests have been made. A woman came before court for eating a crumb cake. A man hauled in for carrying a glass of water around.

The clean-up is on.

But the village mentality doesn't fit 20th century America. In medieval days when there were walls around towns, the local people could rule themselves according to whim. In this open country of 220 million people, there are no walls, only a Consitution. And it includes a variety of rights that may supersede an anti-littering law that forbids certain kinds of food in public.

The funny thing is, Fire Island is the last place you'd expect a law restraining free will.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

ELECTORAL COLLEGE
BY PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would eliminate the Electoral College and replace it with a direct popular national election in which the U.S. president would be elected with 40 per cent of the vote.

This radical proposal, if adopted, would encourage presidential candidates to gear their time, money and policies toward the half-dozen most populous states where big-city machines could roll up extra millions of votes.

The rest of the country would become irrelevant to the executive branch of the federal government, even though the policies and tactics involved in securing extra votes in New York City or Washington, D.C., are often contrary to the best interests of most of the rest of the country.

If the plurality required for the election of a president were reduced from 50 per cent to only 40 per cent, the system would provide a built-in incentive for many candidates to try for the 40 per cent, and conversely an incentive to straw candidates in order to prevent an unwanted candidate from achieving the 40 per cent.

With many candidates in the race, no one would receive 40 per cent, and the final decision would almost always be thrown into the hands of Congress.

This would effectively transfer control over the election of the president from the states and the people to the U.S. Congress, which is the exact opposite of the intent of the Founding Fathers. This would replace our present separation of powers with the European parliamentary system of government.

The Electoral College is one of the legacies of the inspired genius of our Founding Fathers. It was part of the Great Compromise which transformed us from a bunch of rival Colonies into a constitutional Republic. The Great Compromise brought together both the large states and the small by means of a national Congress with one House based on population and the second House on state's rights.

The Electoral College is based on this same compromise, and therefore, requires that presidential candidates heed the voters of every state, regardless of size.

The present Electoral College is the only occasion in our political process in which 50 per cent of the entire nation must agree on something or someone. This provides a basis for the leadership our country needs in time of crisis.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment, we would always have minority presidents with an inadequate basis of support.

When a candidate wins a lopsided victory, no one demands a vote recount. It is the close elections that cause the problems and for which our system must provide. The Electoral College reduces the problems involved in a close election to a minimum.

The Senate was engaged for months during 1975 in trying to resolve the disputed election for a New Hampshire Senate seat. Just imagine the confusion if we were faced with vote recounts in all 50 states at the same time in order to determine if a presidential candidate got 39.999 per cent of the vote or 40 per cent. The present Electoral College system effectively prevents a contest in more than a couple of states in any given election.

One of the principal purposes of our unique Electoral College is to keep the meddling fingers of Congress out of election process. The Electoral College is the only function of our national government that is performed outside of Washington.

The president is elected by electors chosen in their states according to state election laws, who meet and cast their ballots in their own state capitals. No senator, congressman or federal official is permitted to ba an elector in the Electoral College.

The Electoral College has served as well for 200 years, and there is every reason to believe it can continue to serve us for the next 200.

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

Executive Suite's Viewpoint:
Says Unions' No 'Blessing' And
Need No New Legal Powers

WASHINGTON -- Few industrialists know American labor -- and its leaders -- as knowledgeably, even intimately, as does Heath Larry who only recently left U.S. Steel to direct the NAM which has 13,000 affiliated companies employing some 15 million workers. Last month I asked the AFL-CIO's second-in-command, Lane Kirkland, George Meany's heir--apparent, for his comments on the fiercely fought "Labor Law Reform Bill." So even-handedly I asked Larry for his own opinion. Here it is:

By Heath Larry
President, Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers

People ask me why in the world I am advocating defeat of the labor law reform proworked out between the administration and the AFL-CIO. They want to know if I am one of those "union busters" that George Meany talks about.

Hardly. I have dealt with unions -- honorably and fairly -- for forty years. But nothing about that experience convinces me that unions are such an unmitigated blessing that they ought to be shoehorned into employment situations whether or not they are wanted or needed -- and that is what I believe these proposals would do.

Now, I know Mr. Meany has his list of "enemies" -- a list which comprises five or six companies which have been accused of being as callous to the requirements of law as many unions have been. But that's no reason to change our labor law into an organizaing tool for big unions.

Employes have many reasons for wanting to remain out of the unions. They must have -- or three out of four wouldn't have stayed out all these years. Some employes -- particularly those in smaller units -- feel that their opportunity for communicating back and forth with their employer is quite satisfactory; they don't need a union interposed between him and them. Others may have looked around and seen that if they are searching for industrial democracy, there are a few unions which have been just as lacking in it as any employer. others may worry -- and not without justification -- that the union which represents them may insist upon imposing a pattern settlement on their work condition which just might price them out of the job market.

I think we ought to bear in mind that most of the employe units that we are now talking about are generally pretty small. The big units, in the main, got organized years ago. The mass-producing industries had become sufficiently large and complex so that communications between employes and their employers deteriorated. There was a need for a mechanism by which to restore dignity, so much so that employer resistance couldn't stop it. I think any impartial analysis would have to recognize that the impact of unionization in these earlier days was often constructive.

But those situations in which organization has not taken root in succeeding years are different; they are probably situations where the employment conditions are quite good rather than reflecting evil employers who have bludgeoned their employes into submission.

So I can't see how the public interest will be served by further tilting the balance which presently exists in the labor law as to give big unions additional leverage against small employers. If I were a union organizer, I am sure I could use the new tools provided in the proposed law to sweep through a large portion of the unorganized -- and in a very short order.

Picture a small employer confronted with an election petition under rules which say that election will happen within 15 days unless there is some serious problem. He probably doesn't know whether he has a problem or not; his first major problem is probably to find a lawyer who can tell him what his problems are: peculiarly enough, the proposals don't contemplate any such quickie elections. Unless the union feels it has caught the employer napping and has a majority all sewed up -- having been exposed to only the union's side of the story. If the union has any doubts, the proposed law provides for a longer period of time.

And then, can you imagine the disciplinary difficulties in running a plant during an organizing campaign, if discharging an employe becomes virtually impossible -- even if justified -- because compulsory reinstatement will be ordered by the Board? And next, can you imagine the impact if the small employers could be forced into situations where they must risk having big-industry wages applied to them -- applied to them by the NLRB -- before the negotiations are complete?

These are only some of the problems:

One of the great concerns of this nation must be the current trend rate in inflation. And, unfortunately, major unions have never been a moderating influence on inflation. The cost of living clauses on which they have insisted in the last decade have constantly recycled the worst inflation aberrations which have occurred in the economy. Nor, unfortunately, have large unions ever made any notable contributions to improving the economy's efficiency.

Thus, I can't think of anything which would produce a greater boost to the existing inflationary bias in the economy than to have this law passed, and to give the unions the additional leverage which they would achieve as a result of it.

I hold no brief for an employer who will frustrate the free right of employe choice -- whether by threats or false promises or by resort of unfair labor practices. We can't condone unconscionable delays.

I do not contend there have been no abuses by employers under the present law. But there have been fully as many abuses by unions. If we are going to take a look at the law at all, then we ought to take a look at all of it, particularly provisions which could insure employe rights, as is the case in the bills proposed by Sens. Griffin, Hatch and Tower and by Reps. Ashbrook and Erlenborn.

So, my plea is that we keep a fair balance. If any tilt is made, let it be toward protection of employe rights -- not toward the enlargement of union privileges.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Government Manual Offers Buggers Advice on Bugging

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - President Carter, who did his share of hand-wringing over the wiretapping of the Nixon era, has now found himself in possession of a government handbook on wiretapping.

This handy, easy-to-read manual could instruct any enterprising snoop with a set of tools how to eavesdrop on telephone conversations. The White House is embarrassed. The telephone company is horrified.

Still, the Carter disciples are caught in a dilemma. It seems the taxpayers coughed up $47,000 for the instructions on how to wiretap.

It is contrary to the president's spirit of candor and sense of economics to deprive the taxpayers of the information they paid for.

The Office of Telecommunications Policy, which paid for the handbook, was all set to release it for the enlightenment of those who might be interested in the refinements of eavesdropping. But the telephone company raised a howl. American Telephone & Telegraph, one source confided, "is scared to death about too many people finding out about this."

The aggrieved phone company, therefore, urgently alerted Vice President Walter Mondale to the danger. AT & T president Charles Brown warned Mondale in a confidential letter that the wiretap manual "tells how to intercept suburban residential telephones, business data communication ... and the interstate long-distance network ... It tells the reader how to locate, open, tap into, reseal and rebury our cables for the purpose of intercepting customers' communications."

White House officials, putting discretion ahead of candor, have placed the 13-page, how-to-do-it handbook under lock and key. It is now being handled with the same delicate care as nitroglycerin.

The repercussions, meanwhile, have already reached Capitol Hill. Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who uncovered the manual, is eager to know more about the government's wiretap ways. Apparently, the government has been so careless about privacy that it planned to publish the wiretapping instructions. Yet Moss has been denied access to the phone records of past intelligence wiretaps by the White House. Congressional investigators suspect that some of these were really Watergate-style political wiretaps.

It remains a matter of dispute, meanwhile, why the wiretapping instructions were written. An official of the Mitre Corporation, which produced the manual, told us: "We were reluctant to produce anything that could be labeled as a cookbook on wiretapping recipes, but we were asked to do it by the White House."

The White House telecommunications chief, William Thaler, insisted he had informed Mitre explicitly that he didn't want a how-to-do-it book. "There must have been some confusion at the working level," he suggested. Nevertheless, he was ready to release the report until White House science adviser Frank Press urgently intervened.

"This report can lead to much mischief," Press told our associate Howie Kurtz. "The government never should have asked for it." Now White House officials are trying to figure out how to get around the Freedom of Information laws and keep the pamphlet secret.

However, we have obtained a copy of the handbook, which is stamped "Controlled Distribution." We agree with White House aides that it would not be in the public interest to publish the technical details. But there are some general eavesdropping instructions that are worth printing for their entertainment value.

For example, an "interceptor" who might wish to overhear the telephone conversations in a suburban residence, say, "in Northern Virginia between 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. Monday through Friday" is given 11 steps to take. First, he should "climb pole." Upon this lofty perch, suitable also for peeking into second-story windows, he will find a "terminal enclosure." He is instructed to jiggle the appropriate wires; then a tape recorder is recommended for monitoring the intercepted conversation.

President Carter's admonitions on economy, if not privacy, are reflected in the instructions. To "save tape," the eavesdropper is advised that "the tape could be immediately erased if the conversation was not of interest."

For the more ambitious spy who might wish to intercept microwave radio signals, the instructions recommend that he "acquire the use of a small farm along the route." Then he should "set up radio interception equipment, including a sufficiently large antenna, in a barn to avoid being observed."

Pentagon Party: A large defense contractor is throwing a bash for its Pentagon buddies today in Maryland. Watkins-Johnson and Co. is spending up to $40,000, our sources say, on an elaborate affair for bigwigs from the Defense Department, CIA and National Security Agency.

The brass hats will view the company's new equipment as they munch on hot hors d'oeuvres. The firm has even gotten a one-day liquor license to keep the Pentagon people in high spirits. But the executives aren't just being friendly; their company has been awarded $9.5 million in defense contracts this year.

Watkins-Johnson charged a token admission price last year to avoid criticism that it was currying favor with its Pentagon benefactors. But a company spokesman wouldn't discuss the affair with us, snorting: "That is our business and no one else's." When our reporter Valerie Strauss asked one official how she could get an invitation, he said, "You have to do business with us."

Corn growers sue USDA

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The National Corn Growers Association has filed suit in U.S. District Court in an effort to get the U.S. Department of Agriculture to impose tariffs and import fees on foreign sugar.

"The value of 1976 and 1977 corn crops have been depressed from $250 million to $350 million because the Carter Administration has not carried out the explicit mandate of Congress," charged Donald Schlichte, executive vice president of the NCGA.

"The USDA is offering direct payment subsidies to cane and beet growers, but completely ignoring the economic impact upon corn sweeteners," he said.

Named as defendants in the suit filed late Thursday are Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland, the Commodity Credit Corporation of the USDA, and Ray Fitzgerald, the executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The NCGA is headquartered in Boone, Iowa, and has about 8,500 members in 47 states.

Schlichte said corn growers joined in a coalition with beet and cane growers and processors to get the new sugar price support legislation enacted. He said they had assurances from Congress that the measure would bolster prices in the marketplace and protect corn growers as well as beet and cane growers.

Instead, said Schlichte, the USDA deferred immediate application of tariffs and import fees and invoked a direct-payment subsidy plan for beet and cane processors.

Nobel economics prize to 2

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1977 Nobel Economics Prize was awarded today to James Meade of England and Bertil Ohlin of Sweden "for their pathbreaking contributions to the theory of international trade and international capital movements."

Meade, 70, a professor at Cambridge University, is a pioneer in the study of trade development, welfare and other areas. He said the theoretical basis for customs unions and wrote such fundamental works as "The Theory of International Economic Policy."

Ohlin was a Swedish commerce minister in the 1940s and is a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences, which selected the joint Nobel winners.

The relatively new economics prize has been dominated by Americans since it was established in 1969. Six Americans have won the award, the most recent Chicago economist Milton Friedman.

Carter, Torrijos confer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, met for more than 90 minutes today in an effort to put to rest some of the controversy swirling around the proposed Panama Canal treaty.

The two leaders adjourned their White House working session, originally scheduled to last about an hour, without immediately issuing a joint statement. One was expected later, however.

Carter had told a news conference Thursday that a "clarifying statement" might be needed on the major point in dispute — conflicting interpretations of the provision for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense of the canal's neutrality after the year 2000.

Abortion debate resumes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are resuming their fight over the nation's abortion policy after making sure the deliberations won't tie up salaries for thousands of federal employes.

Both houses agreed Thursday to a resolution that will provide money for several agencies until the end of the month while disagreements that are blocking passage of their regular appropriations bills are settled. President Carter signed the measure into effect Thursday night.

Bank has $1 million missing

CHICAGO (AP) — Was it an embezzlement, a burglary or just an accounting error? Apparently no one knows for sure how exactly $1 million in cash disappeared from the underground vault of the country's ninth largest bank.

But a spokesman for the First National Bank of Chicago said not one customer "is going to lose a penny."

Homer J. Holland, senior vice president in charge of administration, said the apparent loss has been charged against the bank's third-quarter earnings, which still are expected to exceed last year's third-quarter earnings.

The apparent loss is the biggest in the history of the bank, Holland said. He added that the bank, second largest in Illinois, has insurance for such losses, but the deductible is greater than the amount missing.

When the bank closed Friday for the three-day Columbus Day weekend, the $1 million was in a locked cart inside a vault, officials said. But at the day's-end accounting of cash on Tuesday, the bank's head teller found that the money was gone, Holland said.

$15 million ransom demanded

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Arab-speaking terrorists holding a hijacked West German jetliner threatened today to kill their hostages, including 11 West German beauty queens, unless "comrades" imprisoned in West Germany and Turkey are released and a $15 million ransom is paid, officials said.

Ninety-two persons, including crew members and the hijackers, were reported aboard the plane. The beauty queens were returning to Frankfurt from a gift trip to the Spanish island of Mallorca when the plane was hijacked Thursday.

The hijackers also threatened that kidnaped West German industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer, abducted by terrorists in West Germany nearly six weeks ago, would be killed if the demands are not met by 4 a.m. EDT Sunday.

A text of the ultimatum was delivered to the French press agency AFP in Paris after the plane with landed in this Persian Gulf emirate.

The ultimatum named 11 West German terrorists and two Palestinians held in Turkey who are demanding to be released and flown to Vietnam, Somalia or Marxist South Yemen. Each of the released prisoners was to be supplied with $43,860 in German marks.

PSC chairman will resign

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale says he will begin a search immediately to find a successor for Missouri Public Service Commission Chairman James Mulvaney.

But the governor, who swept into office on the pledge that he would end what he claimed was utility domination of the PSC, says he does not feel pressured to find a replacement for Mulvaney since the PSC chief has agreed to continue serving until a successor is named.

"Vacancies are a way of life for a government like ours," Teasdale said.

Mulvaney, 43, considered the leading consumer voice on the commission, announced Thursday that he would resign to become a regional field representative for the U.S. Department of Labor in Kansas City.

He will serve as a liaison on all department matters with state, local and community leaders in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

80-county survey indicates Scott County health status in top 13

Despite the expected population decrease of nearly 1,000 persons expected for Scott County in the next 15 years, the overall health status for the area is higher than most of the 80 counties surveyed, according to a recent publication of The Mid South: A Regional Profile.

Out of the 80 counties, Scott county ranked 13th on the list as having the best overall health record. New Madrid, Pemiscot and Mississippi Counties ranked 71st, 73rd, and 74th, respectively.

On the basis of 13 health-related indicators, the 80 counties were ranked from best to worst, based on social and demographic data, to find an index of comparable health statistics. Population is a major factor of health facilities available for use.

Scott County in 1975 had a population 35,200. That, according to the study, is expected to drop to 34,358 in 1990 but rise to 40,492 by the year 2000. Only Butler county, which is expected to increase in population from 36,700 to 44,328 in the next 15 years, gains population in Southeast Missouri.

The study further says that southeast Missouri, including Butler, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Ripley, Scott and Stoddard counties, has a total population of nearly 212,100, which is projected to fall to 199,000 in 1990, but rise by 223,368 in the year 2000. The projections are based primarily on past population trends with other factors, such as local economies, etc. included.

Overall, Southeast Missouri is expected to increase only 5.3 percent in population between now and the end of the century, which is far behind the other areas in the study, with the single exception of eastern Arkansas.

The shortage of medical personnel, especially physicians, is a major factor in the level of health care one can receive in Scott County, and other regions of the Mid-South. Southeast Missouri and North Mississippi have the lowest physician to people ratio of 1 to 1,670 and 1 to 1,666, respectively.

The national shortage of physicians is found in the Mid-South where many counties have these deficits. In 1974, the nation had a physician to people ratio of one to 565 people compared to a one to 982 in the Mid-South in 1975.

Despite the realization that the shortage will increase in the future, optimistic developments may include, a trend back to family practice, more interest in rural practice and new governmental programs to end the shortage.

Missouri Delta Hospital in Sikeston is termed as one of the secondary care centers in the Mid-South that draws from 90 smaller health institutions outside the Memphis, Tenn. area.

Memphis is known as the medical center of the Mid-South region, and supported by these smaller institutions, it offers all levels of service with an emphasis on specialized care.

In recent years, however, there has been a consolidation of hospital facilities in the Mid-South. The number of short-stay hospitals decreased 8.8 per cent since 1970. The number of beds has, however, increased by 1,700 or 10.6 per cent since 1975.

A low income level is partly responsible for the Mid-South's decreasing health status. The long-time dependence on farming and lack of industrialization can be termed largely responsible.

The region still lags behind in income as a whole and those who relied on cotton in the past, especially the Delta areas of Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri were in the lower income bracket.

Despite the decrease in income, Scott County was among four other counties in 1972 to record per capita incomes of over $3,000. Shelby County, Tenn., was by far the most affluent of the region's 80 counties, with a per capita income of $3,533.

Education is also an important factor of health care, because it is an indirect measure of whether an individual can pay for his health expenses. There is also a direct relationship between education and both knowledge of and attitude toward the health care delivery system.

Southwest Missouri has one of the lowest ratings of residents who have completed schooling. Southwest Kentucky residents completed 10.7 yeasrs of school, West Tennessee 11.8. Memphis has the best record of 11.7 completed school years. Even though the health situation has decreased because of the lack of physicians, causes also stem from income and education. Southeast Missouri will also stay behind in health care with the rest unless steps can be taken to first prevent the minor problems which lead to something major.

Judge accused of misconduct

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A state agency is investigating 17 complaints of misconduct against a south-central Missouri Circuit court judge, according to published reports.

The Springfield Daily News Thursday quoted unnamed sources saying the Missouri Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline of Judges would hear complaints against Judge Winston V. Buford of the 37th Circuit at a meeting Nov. 14 in St. Louis.

The six-member panel makes recommendations to the Missouri Supreme Court on disciplining state judges.

Neither Buford, 48, of Eminence, nor his attorney Eugene Walsh would comment on the allegations.

But the newspaper said it had learned that Walsh filed a legal document asking the Supreme Court to block the commission hearing on the grounds that the judge had not been properly notified of the charges against him.

The newspaper said Buford included a partial response to the complaints in a letter filed with the request.

Safety measure: no matter how much you enjoy really rare roast beef, make sure the meat is roasted to an internal temperature of 145 degrees.

Fast cooks like to use cream cheese, melted over very low heat or over hot water, as a sauce for vegetables. To thin the sauce, add two tablespoons of milk when you use a 3-ounce package of the cream cheese.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader asks for first born rerun

Dear Ann Landers: It has been three years since you have had the article on an essay that put each child in his place. It was sent to you by a reader who found it in the library stuck between two books. I have had it on my refrigerator door and it's pretty tattered by this time.

Will you please give it a rerun? The date was Sept. 26, 1974.

Many thanks. -- Mrs. R. In Hialeah, Fla.

Dear Friend: Thanks for asking. The author of that essay is my good friend -- that talented lady, Erma Bombeck. Isn't she the greatest?

Here it is -- with pleasure:

Dear First Born: I've always loved you best because you were our first miracle. You were the genesis of a marriage and the fullfillment of young love.

You sustained us through hamburger years, the first apartment (furnished in Early Poverty), our first mode of transportation (1955 Feet) and the 7-inch TV we paid on for 36 months.

You were new and had unused grandparents and enough clothes for a set of triplets.

You were the original model for a mom and a dad who were trying to work the bugs out. You got the strained lamb, the open safety pins and three--hour naps.

You were the beginning.

Dear Middle Child: I've always loved you best because you drew a tough spot in the family and it made you stronger for it.

You cried less, had more patience, wore faded hand-me-downs and never in your life did anything first. But it only made you more special. You were the one we relaxed with and realized a dog could kiss you and you wouldn't get sick. You could cross a street by yourself long before you were old enough to get married. And you helped us understand the world wouldn't collapse if you went to bed with dirty feet.

You were the child of our busy, ambitious years. Without you we never could have survived the job changes and the tedium and routine that is marriage.

To The Baby: I've always loved you best because while endings are generally sad, you are such a joy. You readily accepted the milk-stained bibs, the lower bunk, the cracked baseball bat, the baby book that had nothing written in it except a recipe for graham-cracker piecrust that someone had jammed between the pages.

You are the one we held onto so tightly. You are the link with our past, a reason for tomorrow. You quicken our steps, square our shoulders, restore our vision and give us a sense of humor that security, maturity and durability can't provide.

When your hairline takes on the shape of Lake Erie and your own children tower over you, you will still be our baby. -- A Mother

Dear Ann Landers: Help! I've been invited to a double wedding. The brides are cousins. I know one of the girls very well. The other is no more than a passing acquaintance.

Am I expected to buy both brides a wedding gift? Please answer. I've asked several people and have gotten a lot of conflicting advice. -- Double Or What?

Dear D Or W: Both brides should receive a gift, but for the one you know slightly a much more modest present will do.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

One of the newest fashion categories is "survival gear." Rugged, practical and good-looking in its down-to-earth design, this jacket from the Pro Action collection by Campus is an excellent example of such "gear." Its rip-stop nylon shell is puffed with down fill to keep you warm in the worst of weather. But Campus gives more than the basics! The jacket has both snap closures and a two-way zipper. Big patch pockets have Velcro closings, cuffs are adjustable and the hood snaps on and off. There's even a patch pocket on the inside! You can't find a more practical jacket--and now it's in style, too!

Woods to play vs. OU

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma and Missouri, healthier than they've been all year, will play before a sellout crowd of 63,500 Saturday in the renewal of a traditionally fierce Big Eight football battle.

Kickoff is 1:30 p.m. CDT.

The last time Oklahoma was in Columbia, Joe Washington bolted 71 yards for a touchdown and lunged across the edge of the goalline for the two-point conversion to give the Sooners a 28-70 triumph.

Last year's 27-20 victory in Norman, preserved with a lastminute pass interception, was Oklahoma's seventh straight triumph over the Tigers.

Both are coming off tough losses. Oklahoma lost on points to border rival Texas and dropped to No. 7 in the national poll. Missouri, off to its most miserable start in many years, was nipped by Iowa State, 7-0, for the Tigers fourth loss in five starts.

But for the first time all year, the Tigers will have a healthy Pete Woods at quarterback, James Taylor at offensive tackle and Chris Garlich at linebacker.

The only good news from Oklahoma's Texas game was that for the first time all year the Sooners all came away healthy.

Jr. High gridders still unbeaten

POPLAR BLUFF — The coaches of Sikeston's 8th and 9th grade football teams stated that it was awfully hard to beat Poplar Bluff. This was expecially true when you have to travel and meet them on thier home field. However, their pregame fears were put to rest as Sikeston scored a big double win that left both teams undefeated.

"Our offense didn't do much," commented 8th grade coach Mike Foster, "but we did more than they did." This in reference to his lads winning the first game of the double header 6-0.

The 9th graders, led by Coaches George Hale and Martin Bass, had a little more to show.

"They're about the strongest team we've faced," said Hale after his 20-8 win. "We progress a little bit each game, and that's what we like to see,"

The improvement this week was a steady offense that drove the ball right at Bluff. All three SHS touchdowns came as the culmination of long drives.

Undra Lane opened the scoring in the first quarter with a two yard plunge. Quarterback Scott McDowell popped over for the two-pointer and Sikeston led 8-0.

Halfback Edwin Beasley added the second Sikeston tally in the third quarter as he raced in from four yard out. Extra point, no good.

The final SHS tally came in the fourth period when quarterback Mike Sherman scored on a one yard sneak. Once again the extra point was no good.

The Mules got on the boards with less than two minutes left in the game. A forty-yard flea flicker got them down to Sikeston's ten, and three plays later they scored. The pass for the conversion was good, but too little too late. (This was the first time this year Sikeston has been scored on.)

For the 8th graders, Steve Green and Nick Garner produced the onlyy offense needed. In the second quarter, quarterback Steve Green rolled out and hit Garner with a pass good for 75 yards and the score. The attempt for two was no good, but it didn't really matter.

The stingy defense of Sikeston, led by tackle John Chandler, was not in the mood let Bluff score.

Both teams will defend their unbeaten records as they host Cape Central Saturday, October 22. The game will played at Public School Stadium with a 9:30 a.m. kickoff time.

Volleyball team wins second match in a row

CAPE GIRARDEAU — To say that Coach Janie Merrick was pleased with her volleyball squad would be an understatement. "They looked like a whole different team!" exclaimed Merrick. "I'm really proud of the way playing."

These comments came after the SHS girl's volleyballers were able to win their second straight match as they downed the young ladies from University High of Cape Girardeau.

Sikeston raced out to win the first game by a 15-8 bulge. In the second, Merrick used her reserves who fell 15-0. Then, in the rubber game of the match, the ladies from SHS spiked their way to a 15-10 win.

"I really think we can hold our now," said Mesrick. Most of the tough Stoddard County teams are behind the ladies.

Their next match will be against thier final Stoddard County foe as the Spikers host Dexter.

Golfers end season

KENNETT — Coach Rosalie Snider was pleased as her young glofers returned from district competition to beat Kennett there. The win was led by Betsy Sikes who continued to out stroke the rivals. She was low among all linksters with a 52.

The final score of the match saw Sikeston win by seven strokes, 218 to 225.

Kennett scorers were led by Debby Tate who shot a 54. She was followed by Lee Ann Woodward's 55, Laura Legan's 57, and Lee Ann Hall's 59.

Sikeston's totals behind Sikes's 52 were Paulette Mather's 55, Lana Adam's 54, and Lee Ann Jones's 57.

SOCCER

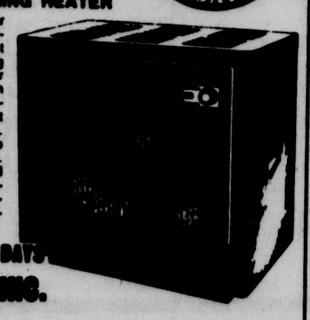

NEW YORK — The owners of the North American Soccer League voted to accelerate the Americanization of the league. The NASL owners decided to limit the number of non-North American players a team can field at one time in a diminishing scale down to six by 1984.

During the 1977 season, teams were permitted to have 10 foreign players on the field at one time. In 1978 only nine will be permitted; eight in 1980; seven in 1982, and six in 1984, Commissioner Phil Woosnam said.

In a move affecting the 30-man roster, Woosnam said the clubs would reduce the total of non-citizens from 15 to 14 in 1978, 13 in 1980, 12 in 1982, 11 in 1984.

GOLF

PARIS — Britain's Nick Faldo fired a five-under-par 67, and grabbed a three-stroke lead after the opening round of the $45,000 Lancome Golf Tournament.

Yanks' Munson, Jackson at it again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The New York Yankees, one big, unhappy family, arrived in the land of the gossip hound and continued to tell tales out of school.

"We have a chance to win the World Series and there's one guy out there second-guessing the manager," said Yankee captain Thurman Munson. Munson was talking about teammate Reggie Jackson, who criticized Billy Martin for using a rusty Catfish Hunter as his second-game pitcher.

"I wouldn't be second-guessing the manager," added Munson, who has been hinting broadly that he wants to be traded to Cleveland, the closest major league city to his native Canton, Ohio.

Martin, not on the trading block but close to losing his job all season long, also felt Jackson's loose lip could sink the Yankee ship.

"Reggie's having enough trouble in right field to keep him from second-guessing the manager," said Martin, who clashed with Jackson and Yankee owner George Steinbrenner throughout the season. "We're in this World Series as a team. None of our players should be talking against their teammate or the manager."

Fifty years after the Yankees' Murderer's Row team spoke softly and carried big sticks, the 1977 Yankees, "Murmurer's Row," was speaking loudly and carrying small sticks.

Meanwhile, over on the other side of the field, the docile Dodgers were providing an interesting contrast, performing their version of "Love Story," an ongoing story of how 25 players and a rookie manager can actually win games without controversy.

The only thing similar about the Yankees and Dodgers is that they each have one victory going into Game 3 in the 1977 World Series tonight.

The Yankees will go with right-hander Mike Torrez, a 17game winner during the regular season, while the Dodgers trot out medical exhibit No. 1, Tommy John, whose rebuilt left arm brought Los Angeles 20 victories this year.

"If I've got a good sinker, everything will be all right," said Torrez, who is playing out his option and could be making his final appearance as a Yankee.

John is also a sinkerball specialist, but he says the big factor in his game will be his curveball.

"The key will be my ability to get my breaking ball over," said John, whose career was saved by a remarkable tendon transplant three years ago. "I've also got to have my good control and be able to change speeds."

The Dodgers won Wednesday night's second game at cavernous Yankee Stadium 6-1 with an awesome power display of four home runs. Dodger Stadium, a very friendly home for the National League champions, is a cozier ballpark.

"I've been trying to tell everybody how lucky I am," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "This club is built on love, spirit and togetherness.

TRICKY TASTE BUDS

Have you ever watched a bluegill approach a worm on a hook, touch it and then reject it without taking a bite?

Puzzling over how a fish could taste a bait without taking it into its mouth, the angling experts at Mercury outboards learned that most fish have taste buds which are located outside the body.

Almost all fish have taste buds in the lips and throat, but many others have specialized areas of the body, such as fins and along the side, which act as taste centers.

Wherever they are located on the fish, taste buds are small cells that open like flower blossoms to test food and send a signal to the brain.

If the taste is acceptable, the fish will likely take the food into its mouth.

A catfish has the most taste buds of any fish. More than 100,000 are located throughout its body.

The majority of these are found in the barbels, special taste organs which protrude from the chin and enable the catfish to detect small amounts of food as it digs up mud.

Fishermen take advantage of the catfish's sharp sense of taste by using baits which gradually dissolve in the water.

As the catfish tastes the bait from some distance away, it is aroused to search out the source of the food and is drawn to the hook.

Tastes vary among different kinds of fish.

Largemouth black bass prefer a fresh bait. A minnow hooked so that it is alive is good and will be eaten.

Bass will turn away from dead or contaminated food.

Gar, on the other hand, are scavengers and will eat almost anything, fresh or spoiled.

Cardinals drop punter Joyce; obtain Carrell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Terry Joyce, who spent long hours during the hot summer working to improve his form, hopes his toil will come back to haunt the St. Louis Cardinals.

"This is just surprising," said the 23-year-old punter, who was placed on waivers Thursday by the National Football League team. "Everybody thinks football is a glamor sport, but there are a lot of tough things."

The Cardinals' assistant operations director, Larry Wilson, said a blocked punt Joyce suffered during St. Louis' 30-24 loss to the Dallas Cowboys last week hurt the 6-foot-6 athlete's cause.

To replace Joyce, the team signed free agent Duane Carrell, who was released earlier this year by the New York Jets. Carrell, a fourth-season veteran, also previously kicked for Dallas, the Los Angeles Rams and the Jacksonville Sharks of the World Football League.

"They thought I was taking too much time, but I couldn't understand their logic," said Joyce, whose average this season was 38.7 yards on 22 punts.

"I cut down on my kicking steps," he said. "I had a good preseason — I was the leading punter. Of the 28 teams, I led the league in preseason. And I was like sixth going into Sunday's game."

Wilson described the 5-10 Carrell as a punter "who can get the ball off quickly. He's averaged about 40 yards and has had only one kick blocked in his career, and that's our main consideration right now."

Joyce, who was in his second NFL season, played quarterback for Highland (Kan.) Junior College. Later he was a tight end and punter at Missouri Southern before he was signed by the Cards as a free agent.

"I think maybe the Cardinals are looking for a scapegoat or something like that," said Joyce. "Maybe they thought they needed an escape for another week and then hope they'll start winning."

Area players lead Indians on defense

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Five games into the 1977 football season, southeast Missourians are leading the defensive efforts fo the SEMO State Indians.

Leading the Tribe in tackles are Alex Clinton, a 218 pound junior from Hayti, and Shane Wagoner, a 200 pound senior from Sikeston.

Clinton, who began the year as a defensive tackle, was moved to the nose position for some of SEMO's earlyy games after Tom McClanahan was injured. He has posted 42 tackles.

Right behind him with 41 stops in Wagoner, who plays a linebacker position for the Tribe.

Another Sikeston native, Jerry Dement, leads the team in assists with 27. The 170 pound junior defensive back ranks fourth in tackles with 29, which includes 12 stops in the Arkansas Tech contest.

Steve Cash, a senior linebacker from Poplar Bluff, is second in assists with 25 and fifth in tackles with 26. Wagoner is third in assists with 24.

The Tribe's other top stopper is not from southeast Missouri but he isn't far away. Don Davis, a 175 pound junior defensive back from Blytheville, Ark., has posted 29 tackles and 20 assists.

Kevin Hunt a senior from Markham, Ill., leads the team in interceptions with two. He has returned them for a total of 74 yards.

Others with one interception each include Gary Briley, Mike Gray, Don Porter, Dement, and Davis.

Mormon missionaries say branch may open here

Currently serving as missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon in the Sikeston area are Elders Kelly Brown of Vernal, Utah and J.B. Tempest of Lyone, Colo.

Both nearing the end of their two-year term as missionaries, Elder Brown came here about a month ago from his previous assingment in Chicago and central Illinois, while Elder Tempest arrived three weeks ago from assignments in the Lincoln Neb., and eastern Missouri areas.

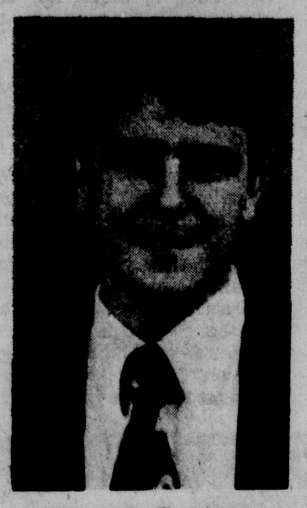

The young men indicated consideration is being given to establishing a branch of the mormon church in Sikeston if a suitable building can be obtained. The nearest branches presently are located in Dexter, Cape Girardeau and Hayti.

Brown 24, has 23 months of service and will complete his two-year term in November. Tempest, 20, has served 19 months.

While in the area, the two keep busy making door-to-door visits presenting the message of the Mormon Church, including information about modern day revelation and continuous scripture, and answering questions about the purpose of life. They also present couseling in the home designed to strengthen family life.

Elder Kelly Brown

Elder J.B. Tempest

Brown said they are sometimes mistaken for "Moonies" (Unification Church) who sometimes go door to door selling items. Both he and Tempest stressed they do not attempt to raise money for the church.

Missionary service is not mandatory in the Mormon Church, and those who serve do so voluntarily and at their own expense. Most pay their expenses for the 24-month term from saving an dhelp from their families, with no financial assistance from the church. After their term ends, return to a life of their own choosing and are not obligated to full-time church service.

Brown whose hometown is and oil town about the size of Sikeston in northeastern Utah, worked in oil field and construction projects to raise funds for his missionary term. When it ends he plans to return to college and study business administration.

Tempest is from a small livestock town northwest of Denver. To pay his missionary expenses he worked for a natural gas pipeline. He wants to prepare for a mechanical designing career after his term ends.

Unlike a majority of the missionaries who have come to the Sikeston area, neither Brown nor Tempest have a long Mormon background. Brown was converted from another denomination about four years ago while living in Lubbock Tex. Tempest is from a non-Mormon family.

Nevertheless, both are enthusiastic about their church and eager to tell others of what it means in their life.

While in Sikeston , they are living at 824 Park Ave. and may be reached at telephone number 471-7956 (mostly in the morning) if anyone wants information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or desires family counseling.

by Larry Swaim

Each of us must, from time to time, turn our attention inward and carefully evaluate ourselves. This self evaluation should be done regularly so that each of us can keep a careful check on ourselves. I Corinthians 13:5, "Examine your own selves whether you are in the faith, prove your own selves." I Corinthians 11:28, "But let a man prove himself and so let him eat of the bread and drink of the cup." In the last scripture reference, the Lord indicates that a man should look inward each time he takes communion to make sure that his life is reflecting the actions and attitudes of Christ. Truthfully, a wise man will carefully study his own behaviour and make regular evaluations and corrections.

Most people find it difficult to see the bad in themselves. It is difficult to be honest with ourselves, yet, before we have a right to criticize others, we must take a critical look at ourselves. Jesus taught that we should remove the log from our own eye so that we can better see the splinter in out brother's eye. It is easy to deceive ourselves. "They themselves measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves with themselves, are without understanding." I Corinthians 10:12. A common mistake is to look at ourselves as the standard by which we judge others; actions, but the Bible should be that standard by which we judge ourselves and others. The words of the old Negro spiritual, "Everybody talkin' 'bout Heaven ain't gwine there," are true words. One of the first steps in spritual self evaluation is to realize that we may be blind to our own faults; that we may have a distorted view of ourselves. The word of the poet, Robert Burns, may serve as an effective guideline: "O, that God the gift would give us, To see ourselves as others see us."

Episcopal Church dedicates addition

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1004 N. Main St., dedicated an addition to its parish house. Extending both east and south the addition provides church school and enlarges the kitchen and common meetin hall.

At the service of Holy Communion before the dedication, the Rev. William Sharkey, Vicar, thanked members of the congregation who had taken special responsibility for the building including Swayne Byrd, the architect; Wendul Hagler, the contractor; and Carl Muench, the building superintendent, who also drew up the preliminary plans for the building.

After the 10:30 a.m. service, congregation recessed with the acolytes, layreader and clergy to the parish house, where the great hall, the kitchen and the classrooms were blessed.

Members of the parish and guests were the Rev. Pipes Jones, former vicar of St. Paul's and his wife, Eugenia, now of Columbia, Tenn.

THE NEW TESTAMENT

No. 21. Jesus Feeds the Multitudes

After Jesus heard the news of John the Baptist's execution, he went alone into a deserted area, but the people followed him. When Jesus saw the multitude, he felt compassion and began to heal the sick.

"And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals. But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves and two fishes. He said, Bring them hither to me." (Matthew 14:15-18)

"And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass; and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed, and brake; and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full." (Matthew 14:19-20)

Chronological study of Christ's life opens

A series of chronological study of the life of Christ opened Wednesday nght at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St., and will continue each Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock for an indefinite period.

The teacher for the study series is the Rev. Clyde L. Riddle, pastor, who has conducted similar studies on many occasions during his ministry as a pastor and college Bible instructor.

Based on all material presented in the Bible about Christ, the study will follow the events of His life as they occurred chronologically as near, as possible, rather than the order in which they are presented in the Four Gospels of the New Testament.

As a background for understanding the conditions under which Christ entered the world, the Old Testament in relation to his coming was summarized in the opening session. Next Wednesday night, material will be presented on the events that transpired in the interval between the end of the Old Testament and the beginning of the New Testament, prior to up a study of Christ's life.

Catholic teen-agers plan area get-together

ORAN – Catholic teen-agers from Oran and Chaffee are completing plans for the "1977 Getting Together" program coming up Oct. 23 Catholic Church here.

The planning team includes Donna Hess, Sara Eftink, J.C. Brucher and Martha Eftink from St. Ambrose Catholic Church in Chaffee and Janice Welter, Janet Kluesner, Kenny Eftink, Betty Gaines and Danny Ressel from Guardian Angels Parish in Oran. Don Emge, the religious education coordinator for the two parishes, is coordinating the planning.

In 1973, David and Doris Eftink of Scott City got the idea of "getting a whole group of kids together and showing everybody that we care." At a time when a lot of people were putting teens down, this young couple decided to let the teens prove otherwise. That first year 430 teens showed up.

Since then, the "getting Together" has been held at Notre Dame High School in 1974, at Sikeston in 1975 and in Leopold last year. The attendance for all previous years has averaged around 450. The peak year was 1974 when 600 youths showed up.

Registration for this year's program will begin at 1 p.m. Oct. 23. The activities will begin with a songfest at 2 p.m.

The teens will then be able to sign up for two worshops. There will be six workshops to choose from, including such topics as sexuality, contemporary music and Christian commitment.

Two of the workshops, one led by a panel of priests and the other by a panel of teens, will allow the participants to raise whatever questions they want.

After the workshops, everyone will gather for a celebration of the Eucharist. A meal will then be provided by the St. Anne's Sodality of Guardian Angels Parish. A dance will conclude the day's activities, with the music provided by the Eddy Martin Sound System.

Churches under pressure to practice what they preach

NEW YORK (AP) — American churches are under spreading pressure to put in practice themselves what they've preached to others — the right of workers to organize for collective bargaining.

The demand for union representation has come from church employes in some Protestant and Roman Catholic institutions. In essence, the church bodies involved have voiced willingness to accept it.

But it's creating strains, economically and philosophically.

It's also compelling "the church to face its relations to its own social doctrine," says the Rev. Patrick Farrell of Washington, D.C., the U. S. Roman Catholic bishops' representative for parochial schools.

Although the major, historic churches, both Protestant and Catholic, have long supported the right of workers to form unions to represent their interests, church workers are among the last labor groups still largely unorganized.

"In a sense, it's a new frontier," observes James A. Hamilton, an attorney and associate general secretary of the National Council of Churches, whose nonsupervisory employes are planning a vote on union representation.

"Churches have talked about labor rights through the years, and perhaps the irony of church employes remaining unorganized is simply that nobody has picked up the ball to organize them," adds Hamilton, a United Methodist.

In any case, the unionizing moves have arisen not only among workers for the interdenominational organization of Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, but have spread increasingly among teachers in Catholic schools.

A U.S. Catholic bishops subcommittee on the matter on Sept. 15 affirmed that in keeping with long-time church teachings supporting labor rights, church employes are entitled to organize and bargain collectively.

But the statement also points out that church employes are part of a "community of faith, formed by Gospel values, whose purpose is service to others."

The church always has held up that idealistic commitment, rather than high pay, as a main motivation for its workers. For it, Catholic clergy and sisters take vows of poverty, and Protestant clergy similarly accept wage levels below what comparable education would command in other fields.

Churches also are in a nonprofit category, their limited resources for schools and other programs dependent on freewill offerings.

Both circumstances — differing from the ordinary commercial-industrial world — make for church difficulties in adjusting to negotiations with unions of church workers.

"It's tough to apply the principle," says Catholic Bishop Joseph A. McNicholas of Springfield, Ill., cochairman of the bishops subcommittee and also head of the U.S. Catholic Conference social-development committee.

"But principle is principle, and we stand behind it."

Already unions have formed among lay teachers in Catholic high schools in 19 dioceses, and also include clergy teachers in Columbus and Youngstown, Ohio, and elementary-secondary parochial teachers in Columbus and New York City.

Movements are under way for unions elsewhere, with it still uncertain among Catholic women's orders whether nuns should be included. They are, in some cases.

Parochial schools in the past were mainly staffed by nuns and clergy in vows, on minimal pay, but parochial teachers have become predominantly laity in recent times, bringing demands for unions, contractual conditions and better pay.

According to a poll, Americans consider these words among the most beautiful in the language: dawn, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, luminous, golden, melody.

Association has nothing to hide, Billy Graham says

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Billy Graham says his evangelistic association has nothing to hide, has done nothing illegal or immoral and will begin issuing annual reports disclosing how it spends up to $25 million in yearly contributions.

Graham, whose organization is headquartered in Minneapolis, told a news conference Thursday that the question of disclosure for religious organizations had not really come up until this year.

"And no churches or church-related organizations are required by law to do so," Graham said. "But the mood of the country is moving in that direction, and I think we will gladly conform to it."

The Graham organization recently has been criticized by the Better Business Bureau for failing to provide prospective contributors with information on how money is spent.

"At the proper time, we will be fully cooperative," Graham said at the news conference.

"My job is to do the spiritual, ministry," Graham added. "I give myself to preaching and writing."

He said the association's board and executive committee have handled financial details and the board will decide, at a weekend meeting, what to disclose. A Graham aide said an announcement is expected next week.

"When people give to our association, they trust that it's being handled properly and wisely and invested for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, which all of it is," Graham said.

He added that "the Gospel is free but the bucket you carry the Gospel in costs money."

Graham broadcasts on hundreds of radio and television stations, publishes a three-million circulation magazine, circulates 100 films and has eight evangelistic teams which have carried crusades to all continents. The association employs 500 people, 400 of them in the Minneapolis headquarters.

Graham also tried to clear up suggestions that his organization had kept secret a $23 million World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund.

He said the secrecy was caused by the news media's inattention, not his design.

"That fund has been as public as we could make it, but nobody's been willing to print anything about it until now," he said. "There's nothing illegal, immoral or unethical about that fund — in fact, we're proud of it." Recently, Graham said the fund had been first revealed in 1971 but that he had not publicized its growth to $23 million for fear it would bring a flood of requests for grants.

Women ministers see no problems in role

By JIM KOFSKI
Associated Press Writer

The Rev. Nancy Scarff, one of two women ministers serving parishes in North Dakota, says she finds no advantage in her sex or her age — 27 — as associate pastor at Faith United Methodist Church in Williston.

Instead, she stresses "just being a different person. I think every individual has different things to offer."

The Rev. Eve Hook, 33, associate pastor at McCabe United Methodist Church in Bismarck, agrees.

"I do not feel I'm the only one who has a ministry just because I'm ordained," she said. "I feel everyone in the congregation has a vital role. I feel I should help them see those possibilities in themselves and help them carry them out."

The Rev. Scarff said assuming her parish duties "wasn't awkward at all."

"At times, it gets frustrating, being new," she said. "You're often aware that it's a new thing by people's curiosity. But people are very accepting."

"It's been pretty much a joy," the Rev. Hook said. "The parishioners have reacted really beautifully toward me.

"I sometimes feel on display, which creates pressure," she added. "You're on display both for being a minister and for being a woman. Occasionally you get a little tired of it. You just want to be a person who happens to be a minister."

The Rev. Scarff, ordained a deacon last year and eligible to be ordained an elder this spring, said she finds "just getting to know people and participating in life with them" the most rewarding part of her ministry.

She said she is not focusing on a single ministry and added, "One stereotype we're trying to get away from is that only women work well with youth and children."

The Rev. Hook, ordained an elder in 1974, said, "I tend to find most of my rewards with one-to-one relationships and feel that I probably work best in that area."

Both ministers see an advantage in their single status.

"There's a lot of single people, and maybe I'll have more ability to minister to single people than if I were married," the Rev. Scarff said.

"I am a divorced person, and I don't try to hide that," the Rev. Hook said. "So I've found that I could use some of that experience in relating to some persons in our own congregation who are going through divorces and having a rough time that way."

The Rev. Scarff said the Methodist Church had been ordaining women since 1956 and now counted some 500 women among its ministers. She said she would encourage others to enter the ministry.

Panel wants Baptist colleges to pull out of subsidy system

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — A committee of the Missouri Baptist Convention has recommended that four Baptist colleges withdraw from the state's system of tuition subsidies because of state guidelines banning religious discrimination in hiring.

The committee's recommendation will be taken up at the convention's annual meeting Oct. 24 in Springfield.

William Jewell College in Liberty, Southwest Baptist College at Bolivar, Hannibal-LaGrange College at Hannibal and Missouri Baptist College at St. Louis could be affected.

The committee recommended that the colleges withdraw from the Missouri tuition grant program by 1981 unless the state drops a prohibition against religious discrimination in the hiring of administrators, faculty and staff.

State grants of up to $700 a year are available to students attending private colleges in Missouri.

Chuck Rainbolt, student government president at William Jewell said some students who are outstanding academically might not attend the college if the state aid program were rejected. "Should we withdraw from that program we are going to turn into an institution that just baby-sits kids."

The committee recommended that the schools not accept money if it required them to change from their distinctive Baptist nature and purpose.

"I think it's pretty apparent that if the report is adopted by the convention the college will have to choose between complying and not complying," said Judge William E. Turnage, who is president of the William Jewell trustess and a member of the Missouri Court of Appeals.

The Missouri Constitution provides that state money shall not go to schools controlled by religious denominations or created to further a religious cause.

In August of 1976, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled that the tuition grants at private colleges were not themselves unconstitutional. It did not rule on how they are administered.

The state board which administers the grants renewed William Jewell's eligibility in November after it presented a statement that it has no written policy requiring religious descrimination in hiring employes.

Rejected hymnal may be published anyway

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The publishing arm of the Luthern Church-Missouri Synod plans to publish a new Lutheran hymnal in 1978, despite rejection of the hymnal by the synod at its July convention.

Concordia Publishing House in St. Louis said it still plans "at this time" to publish the new Lutheran Book of Worship. The hymnal will be published with Augsburg Publishing House of the American Lutheran Church and Fortress Press of the Lutheran Church in America.

At its biennial convention last July, the Missouri Synod withheld approval of the new hymnal, which had been developed jointly by four North American Lutheran churches.

The synod decided that a panel should evaluate the book and either recommend changes or advocate the start of work on a separate hymnal. The "blue ribbon panel" is to make its recommendations at the 1979 convention, but the hymnal is slated for publication next fall.

The Rev. Ralph Reinke, president of Concordia Publishing, said the firm "must keep our hand in."

"It is unclear at this time what the committee is going to do, and what our response should be," he said.

Reinke noted that the Missouri Synod still sends representatives to the Inter-Lutheran Commission on Worship, the body that drafted the hymnal. Therefore, he said the church is "still involved in the preparation of the book."

If it continues as joint publisher, Concordia will be able to distribute the hymnal to Lutheran congregations next fall. However, Missouri Synod congregations will not be permitted to make official use of the book unless it wins approval at a synod convention.

Parable of talents nets church $3,500

WILTON MANORS, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. John Stauffer put his money where his Bible was and instructed his parishioners to go forth and make money to air condition the church.

They went forth with a variety of raffles, sales — and one poker game. They madeth $3,500.

Re-enacting the New Testament parable of the talents, the Rev. Mr. Stauffer took out a $1,000 personal loan and gave $5 to each of his parishioners at the First Christian Church in this Fort Lauderdale suburb. The church is raising money for a $34,000 air conditioning system.

"It was a tremendous success," said the 27-year-old minister.

"The story in the parable was that all men are not equal according to their abilities," says Stauffer. "What makes them equal is their effort to use their talents to the fullest. That is what we are doing now in the church."

The Bible tells how a nobleman gave a silver coin, or talent, to each of three servants. Two servants returned with more than they were given and were rewarded, but a third saved his and was admonished.

In the re-enactment, parishioner Gordon Price used his talent, and connections as a meat supplier, to raffle off some steaks. Pooling his $5 with two other church members, Price returned $178 to the church.

C.J. Salerno, a cabinet-maker, used his $5 to build bird feeders, which he sold to net $78 for the church. "It was right up my alley," he said.

Two families combined $50 and held a bingo party — earning $163. Others sold homemade shell necklaces, tables, and other items. Two teen-aged girls turned their living room into a restaurant and sold $10 steak dinners.

sored by Senator Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

Keeling said today that while the change has lessened pressure on communities to join the flood insurance program, there is still plenty of pressure that can be exerted by Washington.

Eceonomic sanctions remain in effect against property owners in flood prone areas, he said, and the mortgage loan sanction is still in effect for residents in those communities which are still in the flood insurance program.

"We think there's enough of the mortgage loan sanction intact to challenge the principal," he said.

As the law stands now, a resident in a community not in the flood program, cannot obtain flood insurance and can expect no federal financial help if his property is flooded.

In those communities which have joined the program, some property owners feel they are in equally bad shape.

The program designates areas prone to flooding and requires that structures be built above the 100 year flood level. It also designates floodways and bans all construction within those areas. Sikeston has floodways along its drainage ditches.

The coalition says the flood insurance program takes away the use of property without compensation.

The law has left some property owners with land they say which they can neither dispose of nor develop.

Lloyd Stoner, Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Chairman; Jim Clay, Cerebral Palsy board member; and Gene Aufdenberg of Sikeston are working to m ake arrangements for the transportation and sale of the stallion.

Rogers stated in his discussions with the Sikeston Jaycees, "The development of the physically and mentally handicapped deserves our closest attention. It gives me much personal satisfaction to be able to make this contribution to an organization not federally or state funded, and I sincerely appreciate the work of the Jaycees in making the opportunity available.

"I feel confident that the great Sikeston community and surrounding area will get behind our project to assure the new Cerebral Palsy Center will become a reality."

Each year, Rogers hosts and produces a celebrity softball game in Las Vegas, Nev., whichraises thousands of dollars for the Special Olympics for the mentally retarded. The Sikeston project fits hand-in- hand with the "charitable activities which this fine humanitarian, gentleman and star performer has conducted for several years," Jaycees said.

Plans were made known earlier this week by the Scott-Mississippi- New Madrid Counties United Cerebral Palsy Board to construct a 5,000 square foot Children's Therapy Center.

Although the site of the building has not been announced, action is being taken by Weber Gilmore, a Sikeston attorney and cerebral palsy board member, to have it constructed near the area of the New Dawn State School on Glenn Drive.

The building, which is being designed by Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes of Sikeston, will be erected in Kenny Rogers name. This move was made by the cerebral palsy board meeting Wednesday, following the announcement of the contribution.

The decision was related to the performer in a telephone conversation by Sikeston Jaycee President Charles Stamp Jr., following the artist's appearance on NBC's Today Show on Thursday morning.

Rogers replied, "I expected no such honor. I am truly humbled. Please pass on my sincere appreciation to the Association and to the entire community."

The building is being geared to the handicapped with five-feet hallways, four-foot doorways and no stairs. The new center will house a kitchen, office, private physical therapy room, main therapy room, utility room, speech therapy room, parent conference room, five bathrooms, whirlpool room, garage, full basement and storage area.

The Bootheel Sub-Area Council will meet at the Ramada Inn, Room C, Sikeston, Mo., On Oct. 17, 1977 at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

The building is one of the oldest in Benton and formerly housed the Scott County Kicker Newspaper and a rooming house for jurors.

The county court earlier this year applied for federal money to construct the new magistrate court building and originally had been awarded a grant of approximately $125,000, but then discovered more money might be available if they re-applied to include other federally approved projects.

After re-submitting their application the county was awarded $429,000. The added projects include renovation of the present courthouse including repairing the pillars and installing storm windows and air-conditioning and renovation on the county highway building including installing a ceiling, building a storage building for equipment and creating two offices.

The grant, made available through the Economic Development Administration, is part of an economic stimulus program.

With the acceptance of the grant, the county agreed to have the program under contract within 90 days of Sept. 26.

Waters told the court that leaves only 73 days before contractors must be starting work.

In other business, Fred Glover of the Scott County Juvenile Department reported to the court that liability insurance coverage for the juvenile officers is due to be renewed by Nov. 1.

Glover said the cost of the insurance coverage has been running $65 per year for each officer through the Missouri Sheriff's Association but that he has received a letter saying the coverage willmpw cpst $194.70 per officer for the coming year.

He added this additional expense has not been figured in the budget and asked the court what they will allow additional money over the budget.

The county court asked Glover if he knew what the legislature was going to allow for juvenile services in the coming year. Glover said he did not know at this time.

After further discussion the court said they would pay an additional $400 for the liability insurance to have a total of three officers covered. Glover said the other officer could be used in the office for present time.

Matthews -- J.R. King made a business trip to Cairo Sunday.

Corn is the king in the Sikeston district this year. Not only is the acreage the largest ever known here, but the yield also was never equalled before.

Effective November 2nd next, there will be an increase in first-class postal rates. Letters will require three cents postage if their destination is beyond the service of the local office. Drop letters will remain at two cents. Postal cards must bear two cent stamps.

The Sikeston Bulldogs will play their first football game of the season on the local high school field at 1:30 this afternoon. Malden High School is the opponent. At a meeting of the team held yesterday Ned was elected captain for the year. Will Harper of Bertrand, a former Missouri Tiger, will referee the game.

The following Sikeston boys available for this afternoon's contest: Wade Malcolm, Pleas Malcolm, Ned Tanner, Jackson Milem, Allen Franklin, Lannis Comer, Marvin Burton, Harold Lindley, Virgil Randolph, Gus Wainman, Milem Limbaugh, Lewis Emory Baker, Willard Shain, Craven Watkins, Don Vowels, and Paul Witt.

The work of paving Malone avenue is progressing. Unless winter comes earlier than usual, it is likdely the street will be finished this year. The new street is very narrow for the entire length of Malone, being only 20 feet wide. This, however, is all of the space available between the Missouri Pacific right-of-way and the curb line on the south side of the street.

E.R. Ryan, formerly with the district officers of the National Reemployment Service at Cape Girardeau, has been transferred to the Sikeston office as interviewer. Carl Wedeking, who has held that post here, will be transferred to Cape about October 25. The first meeting of the Womans Club for the new year was held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J.R. Nolen. Mrs. L.M. Hollenbeck, the new president, presided and made a short talking cutlining the work of the club for the year. One of the interesting projects will be the organization of a Junior Womans Club. Mrs. Sayers Tanner will be assisted by Mrs. H.E. Reuber and Mrs. Reginald Harwell in the work of organizing this club.

A cat apparently afflicted with rabies went on a rampage Wednesday and Thursday morning, biting and scratching at least five people in the northeast part of the city. The animal, owned by Philip Sadler, 529 Sikes, suddenly became violent Wednesday and scratched Mrs. Sadler. A few minutes later it scratched her sister-in-law, Mrs. J.A. Stovall, and Thursday clawed Mrs. Sadler's father, G.W. Hydrick. Two boys on their way to the Bailey School, Phil Waldman, young son of Mr. and Mrs. E.P. Waldman, and Ernest Milo Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gray, were attacked at different places Thursday.

Morehouse -- Mesdames Harry Cook and Melvin Sullivan were business visitors in New Madrid Monday.

What's the law?

First husband is test tube father

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

For Marty, marriage was an institution where his joys were divided and his troubles multiplied. His biggest woe, however, evolved because he couldn't have children. After Marty consented to his wife's having a baby by artificial insemination, she gave birth to a son and then divorced Marty. And, if that wasn't upsetting enough, his erstwhile wife and her second husband wanted to adopt "his" child who had become his pride and happiness.

"Enough is enough," Marty protested in court. "Under the law in this state, a parent's consent is required for an adoption and, as father of my son, I won't give it."

"He's gotta' be joking," responded Marty's former wife. "He's not the father. The father was a test tube . .. with a third party doner. He had no more to do with the birth of my son than the mailman."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the adoption without beleaquered consent?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a child born after artificial insemination of a wife by a third party doner, with the consent of her husband during a valid marriage, is deemed a child of the marriage. And, concluded the judge, since Marty is considered the lawful parent of that child, his consent is required, by statute, prior to an adoption.

Living On Three Levels

1542 SQ. FT. LIVING AREA

MODEL BC1542

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

More than 1,800 square feet of living space is provided by this house when the family room behind the garage on its lower level is included in the count. Note how tidily this plan adapts to uneven ground contours, utilizing them for both practicality and extra charm.

Steps lead up to the double door main entrance and a central entry just inside carefully channels traffic in an efficient manner to all levels of the house. The large comfortable living room, complete with fireplace and big picture window has a wide view of the separate dining room at the rear, for an even greater feeling of spaciousness.

The back of the house kitchen has a convenient modified U-shaped work area with plenty of counter and cabinet space and a dining counter too. Sliding doors give access to the rear of the lot and stairs lead from here to the lower level family room and garage.

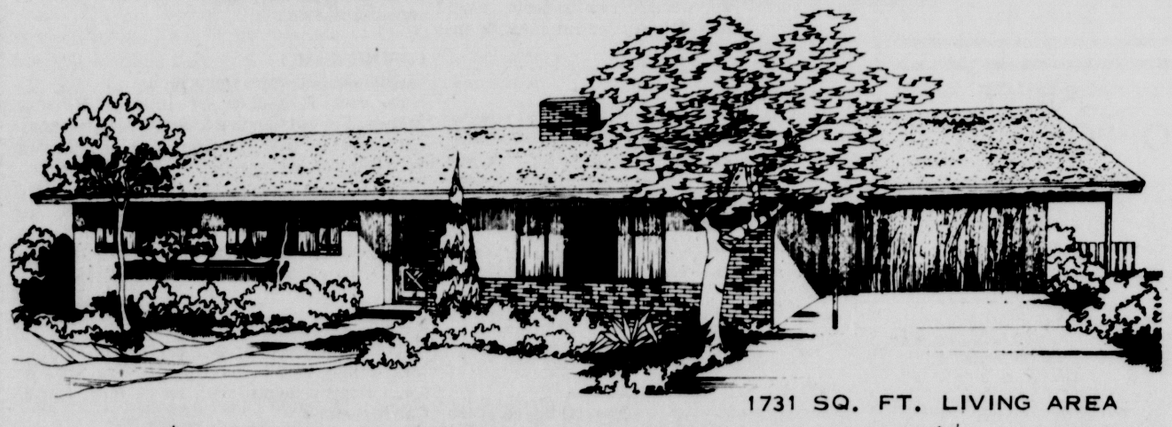

On this lower floor the double garage is backed up to a big family room, and a bath and a utility room with storage area and laundry facilities are also included.

On the uppermost level, reached by another flight of stairs from the central entry on the main floor, there are three good, big bedrooms and two full baths, plus plenty of very adequate closets, including a walk-in model in the master bedroom. Note that these back to back baths are also in line with the bath and laundry on the lower level to insure maximum economy in plumbing installation.

Plants and Patio

1731 SQ. FT. LIVING AREA

MODEL C1731

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

There is a certain air of cozy welcome apparent even before entering this big, attractive ranch style house and it may spring from just such little touches as that plant shelf on the wall below the bedroom windows.

Then again, there is undeniable living pleasure in the long, rear covered patio, fit snugly into the basic lines of the house itself. Enclosed on two sides by the house, and on a third by the garage, this highly useful outdoor living area not only increases the livability of the family room but also has a handy door to the big two car garage and the laundry facilities located there.

Now, consider that family room more closely. It is, in effect, part of a tremendous country style kitchen, for the two areas are separated only by floor to counter cabinets and a convenient dining counter. Note, too, its fireplace, actually a second opening from the chimney unit which provides a living room fireplace also. The kitchen work area covers almost all of four walls, thus giving the ultimate amount of storage and work space and there is a kitchen door to the garage, too, for extra convenience. And, do not overlook the small, but practical pantry.

At the front of the house, a semi separate entry keeps the living room totally private and channels traffic efficiently to the rear living areas or to the bedrooms at the left of the house.

There are three of these, the master bedroom being specially noteworthy with its bath, dressing room, linen closet and triple clothes closets. The other two bedrooms are also well designed in regard both to size and closet space.

A lot of imaginative designing skill has produced here a house which has both the basic and the extras needed to provide living pleasure day in and day out.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 14, the 287th day of 1977. There are 78 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1066, Normans under William the Conqueror defeated the English at the Battle of Hastings.

On this date:

In 1644, the founder of Pennsylvania, William Penn, was born in London.

In 1890, the 34th president of the United States, Dwight Eisenhower, was born in Denison, Texas.

In 1933, Germany announced it would withdraw from the League of Nations.

In 1944, in World War II, British and Greek troops liberated Athens from German occupation forces.

In 1947, U.S. Air Force Capt. Charles Yeager tested a rocket-powered research airplane in California and became the first person to fly faster than sound.

In 1964, the American civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

Ten years ago: U.S. planes pounded a shipyard and other targets in the area of the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

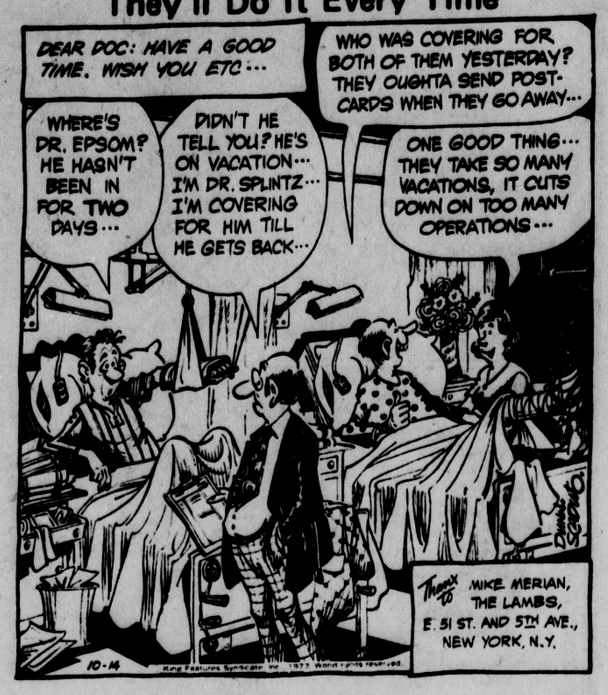

Five years ago: The government of President Salvador Allende in Chile put four provinces under a state of emergency as continuing strikes crippled the country.

One year ago: President Gerald Ford said he had made a mistake in saying that the Soviet Union did not dominate Eastern Europe.

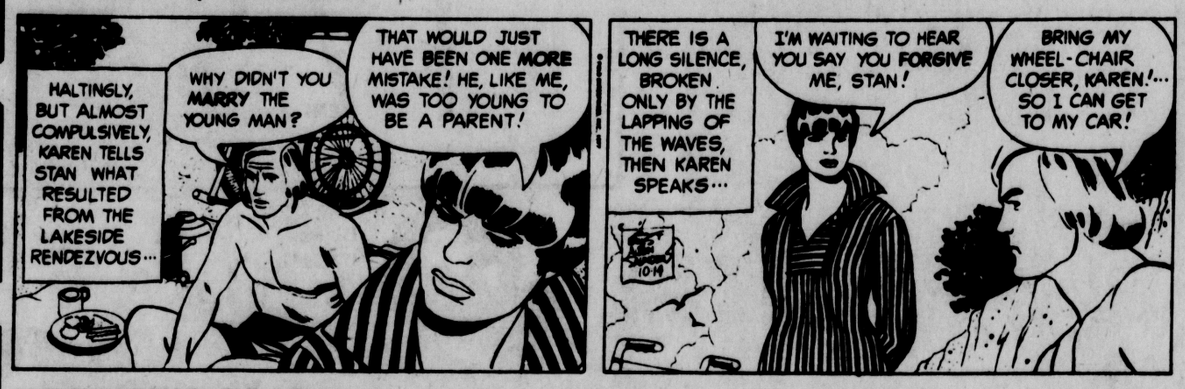

Today's birthdays: Actress Lillian Gish is 81 years old. Pianist Gary Graffman is 49.

Thought for today: Everything comes to him who hustles while he waits — Thomas Edison, American inventor, 1847-1931.

Nina Marshall named Woman of the Year

By Shirley Pritchett

CHARLESTON — Two-outstanding community women were honored Thursday night during the 12th Annual Woman of the Year event at the high school, sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Selected Woman of the Year for 1977-78 were Mrs. Nina Marie Marshall. Sharing honors with Mrs. Marshall as the BPW Woman of the Year was Mrs. Bernice Stewart. Each honoree received an arm bouquet of yellow roses and an engraved silver tray.

Mrs. Marshall, chosen by out-of-town judges on the basis of qualifications submitted by other Charleston organizations was introduced by Mrs. Dorothy E. Ledbetter, vice president of the local club and general chairman of the banquet who described her as an activist of many things good and worthwhile in her community, church and her home.

Cited for her devotion to her family, her love for the aged, particularly those who have no immediate families, and the sick were also noted. "She remembers those persons on a birthday or special occasion with a gift, bnouquet of flowers, or even a invitation to her home for a meal, complete with birthday cake, with her own family". Mrs. Ledbetter commented.

Wife of Herbert Marshall and the mother of five children, Mrs. Marshall has been active in an unlimited number of school activities, including band boosters, room mother, Girl Scouts, and Boy Scouts.

For many years she has served as neighborhood volunteer for the Cancer Society and the Multiple Sclerosis Socie-

Change in flood law won't affect area suit

The change in the flood insurance program signed into law Wednesday by President Jimmy Carter will have "no drastic effect" on the legal challenge being brought by those communities fighting the program.

That's the word from Terry Keeling, president of the Texas Landowners Rights Association and member of the board of directors of the Food Insurance Litigation Coalition.

The coalition expects to have the challenge before the Supreme Court by early next year.

Sikeston and Cape Girardeau are among the communities that have joined the landowners association in the fight.

Under the new law, residents in communities not in the flood insurance program can still obtain conventional loans through banks. Previously, the federal government had the power to halt loans in those communities which refused to join.

The legislation, in the form of an amendment to the national housing and community development act, was spon-

Farm worker crushed

BERTRAND -- A farm worker, Willie James Reynolds, 46, was killed about 10:30 a.m. today when a truckbed fell on him at the A. M. Wilson Farm on Route CC approximately four miles west of Bertrand.

Reynolds reportedly was working on the dump bed of a farm truck when the trailer fell, crushing him between the bed and truck frame.

Complete details were not available this morning.

The body was taken to McMikle Funeral Home in East Prairie.

Kenny Rogers gives his stallion to CP

By Jill S. Corti

Kenny Rogers, one of the nation's leading solo performers and 25th annual Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo star, has donated his grey, seven-year-old Arabian stallion, Borraabby, to the Scott-Mississippi- New Madrid Counties Cerebral Palsy Affiliate.

The gift of the stallion was announced at 2 p.m. today at a joint press conference held by the Sikeston Jaycees and the Cerebral Palsy affiliate.

CP officials also announced that the new CP center to be constructed in Sikeston will be erected in Rogers' name.

On Aug. 13 of rodeo week, Rogers told the local Jaycees at a luncheon that he was sincerely interested in donating the community his Arabian stallion. Since that time, the Sikeston Jaycees have been working "almost weekly" with Rogers and his management team in making arrangements for this contribution from the recording artist to the Sikeston community.

After much deliberation, it became apparent both to the Sikeston Jaycees and to Rogers, that the need for a new cerebral palsy center in Sikeston was of high priority.

Following discussions between members of the Sikeston Jaycees and the recording artist in Nashville, prior to the Country Music Association Awards Monday, and again through telephone conversations on Wednesday, the final decision was made.

Borraabby, who was sired by the internationally renowned Naborr, stand 15.1 hands and is now stabled at the Hallmark Farms in Middleton, Calif.

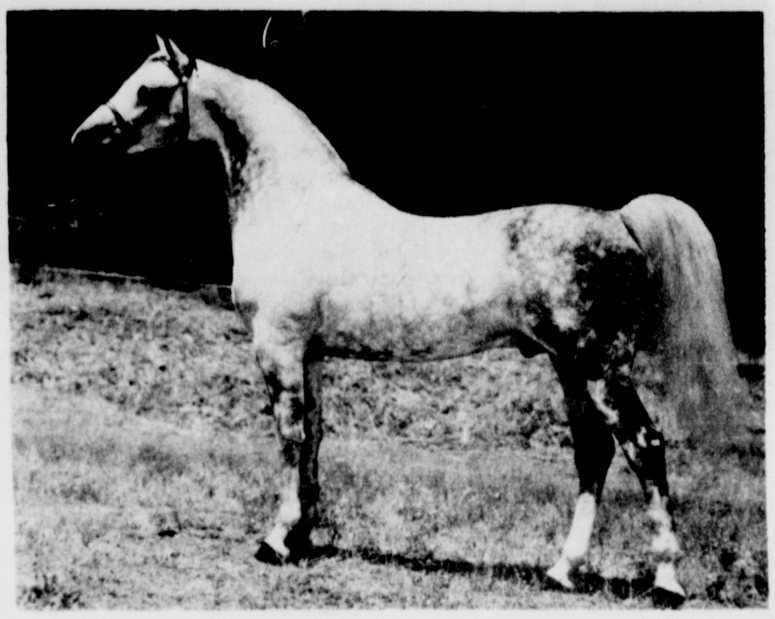

Foled by Aabby in Scottsdale, Ariz., on May 7, 1970, Borraabby was initially owned by recording artist John Davidson, who transferred ownership to Rogers in August of 1972.

The horse is registered under number 338780 with the Arabian Horse Registry of America. He has been shown in the Western Pleasure Class.

Naborr, who sired the horse, was bred in Russia and imported into the United States by the late Ann McCormick, owner of the International Harvester Equipment Co. At her death, Naborr was auctioned off for $150,000. Of his offspring in the United States, 68 per cent have won championships.

"In all likelihood, The Arabian Stallion will be transported to Sikeston for sale at a private treaty or auction. The value of the animal has not been determined," Jaycee officials said.

County Court to make building decision Monday

BENTON — C. R. "Buddy" Waters, an engineer with Waters and Associates and Scott County Surveyor, presented sample plans for a new Scott County Magistrate Court building to the Scott County Court Thursday.

Waters told the court that the sample plans are for a single story court building with 4500 feet of floor space, with an estimated cost in the neighborhood of $180,000. The building can be placed on the lot west of the present County Courthouse, which the county bought in April, he said.

Placing the building on the 55 feet by 108 feet lot would require removing the present building. Waters said it was his opinion that the older building should be removed because an adition to the present building would be too expensive.

Waters said the cost of a two-story addition would be approximately $27,000 more if both floors had 2,250 feet of floor space, with a total area equal to that of the single-story building.

County court members told Waters they expected to have a decision by Monday as to where they wish to build the new court building.

In expressing their opinions, Judge Eldon Ziegenhorn, said he cannot impagine an old building remaining next to the new court house; Judge Melvin Glueck said he felt the cost would be cheaper by utilizing the older building with a two-story addition and wanted to check with another engineer and if he found that it would be cheaper to build the one story building he would be in favor of removing the older structure; and Judge Loule Hirschowitz has been maintaining that the older building

The strength of the United States over the more 'han 200 years of our nation's existence has been its faithful commitment to the belief in the freedom of the individual. Our founding fathers provided us with a system which has fostered individual rights and permitted maximum opportunity for all to participate in the governmental process.

Making that system work is the responsibility of each of us as citizens. The spirit of the Washington, Jefferson, Adamses and Franklins must be no less strong today. Every American has a stake in the successful administration of the nation's laws and in retaining the rights provided us under the Constitution.

Each of us must make a personal commitment to make full use of the rights and obligations of living in a free society. If the democratic process is to function effectively— and to prevail — we must all play a part in it. That extends beyond taking advantage of our privilege to vote. If we feel strongly about a cause, we must speak out and work on behalf of our belief.

We can be encouraged by what seems to be renewed interest in fully participating in the political process. Increasingly, citizens are writing, calling and visiting with their elected representatives. Increasingly, they are actively working for causes in which they believe.

The late Robert Maynard Hutchins, shortly before leaving his post as president of the University of Chicago, offered a message that sums up the American ideal: "How is the educated man to show the fruits of his education in times like these? He must not acquiesce in injustice, nor turn his back on it, when he sees it happening. He must cling fast to his faith in freedom. He must insist that freedom is the chief glory of mankind, and that to repress it is to repress the human spirit itself."

TRUTH IN MILEAGE

Very few new car buyers have been getting that "35 country, 23 city" or whatever the official gasoline mileage figures are for a particular automobile. Some have been so upset by the discrepancy between advertised and actual performance that they have stormed into dealers asking, "How come?"

Storm no more. The Environmental Protection Agency, which administers the mileage tests, says it is going to change the tests beginning with the 1979 model year so they more accurately reflect the mileage motorists actually get on the road.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

ELECTORAL COLLEGE
BY PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would eliminate the Electoral College and replace it with a direct popular national election in which the U.S. president would be elected with 40 per cent of the vote.

This radical proposal, if adopted, would encourage presidential candidates to gear their time, money and policies toward the half-dozen most populous states where big-city machines could roll up extra millions of votes.

The rest of the country would become irrelevant to the executive branch of the federal government, even though the policies and tactics involved in securing extra votes in New York City or Washington, D.C., are often contrary to the best interests of most of the rest of the country.

If the plurality required for the election of a president were reduced from 50 per cent to only 40 per cent, the system would provide a built-in incentive for many candidates to try for the 40 per cent, and conversely an incentive to straw candidates in order to prevent an unwanted candidate from achieving the 40 per cent.

With many candidates in the race, no one would receive 40 per cent, and the final decision would almost always be thrown into the hands of Congress.

This would effectively transfer control over the election of the president from the states and the people to the U.S. Congress, which is the exact opposite of the intent of the Founding Fathers. This would replace our present separation of powers with the European parliamentary system of government.

The Electoral College is one of the legacies of the inspired genius of our Founding Fathers. It was part of the Great Compromise which transformed us from a bunch of rival Colonies into a constitutional Republic. The Great Compromise brought together both the large states and the small by means of a national Congress with one House based on population and the second House on state's rights.

The Electoral College is based on this same compromise, and therefore, requires that presidential candidates heed the voters of every state, regardless of size.

The present Electoral College is the only occasion in our political process in which 50 per cent of the entire nation must agree on something or someone. This provides a basis for the leadership our country needs in time of crisis.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment, we would always have minority presidents with an inadequate basis of support.

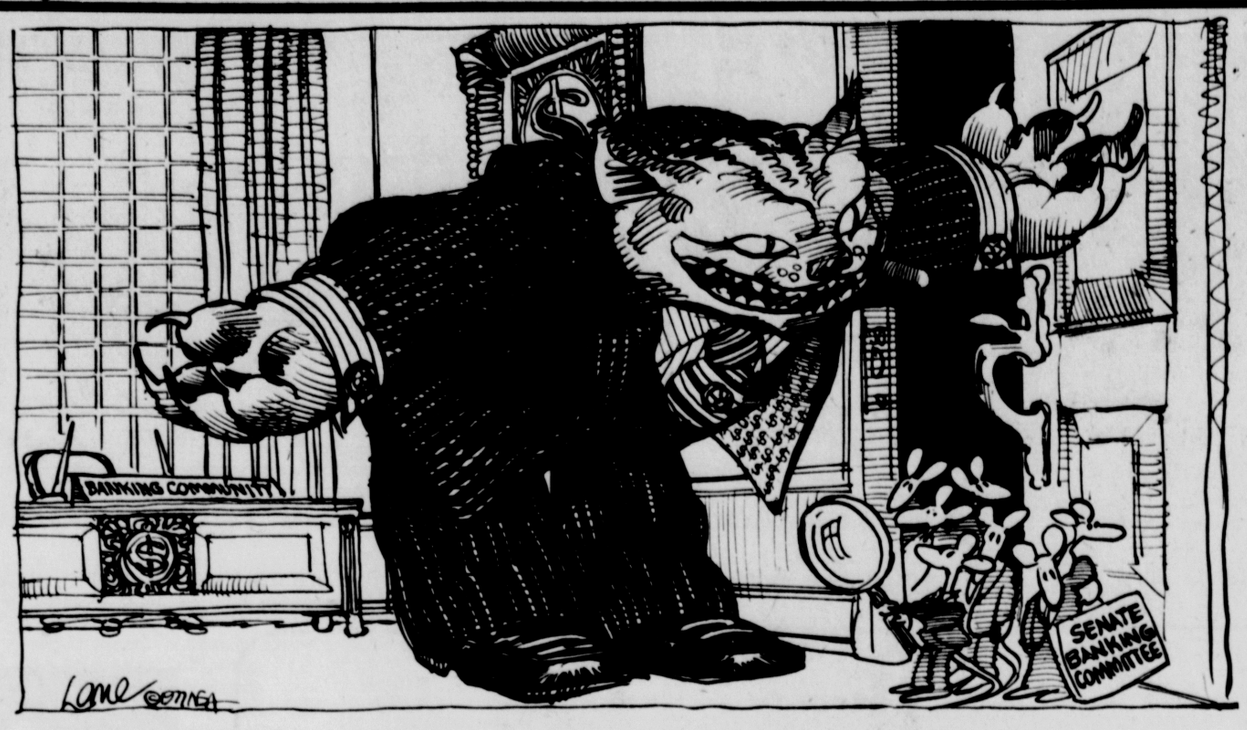

When a candidate wins a lopsided victory, no one demands a vote recount. It is the close elections that cause the problems and for which our system must provide. The Electoral College reduces the problems involved in a close election to a minimum.

The Senate was engaged for months during 1975 in trying to resolve the disputed election for a New Hampshire Senate seat. Just imagine the confusion if we were faced with vote recounts in all 50 states at the same time in order to determine if a presidential candidate got 39.999 per cent of the vote or 40 per cent. The present Electoral College system effectively prevents a contest in more than a couple of states in any given election.

One of the principal purposes of our unique Electoral College is to keep the meddling fingers of Congress out of election process. The Electoral College is the only function of our national government that is performed outside of Washington.

The president is elected by electors chosen in their states according to state election laws, who meet and cast their ballots in their own state capitals. No senator, congressman or federal official is permitted to ba an elector in the Electoral College.

The Electoral College has served as well for 200 years, and there is every reason to believe it can continue to serve us for the next 200.

"Welcome, gentlemen! You're just in time for lunch."

COUNTY BOND ISSUE MAY BE THE ANSWER

As much as we, and thousands of others, dislike the idea it is becoming increasingly evident that unless unexpected maoney comes to Monroe County, we'll be forced to issue county bonds for construction of bridges, culverts and drainage tubes.

With its over 800 miles of streams Monroe County has more miles of flowing water and more bridges, than any county in Missouri, and probably may be first or close to the top of any county in the nation.

County road officials plan accurate count of the stream-spanning or drainage structures that sorely need to be replaced with heavier and wider ones to carry the weighty and more numerous traffic of today.

They already know that there are hundreds of them, and they also know there isn't enough money now, nor will there be in the forseeable future, to replace any but a very few.

They were built in most cases in the horse and buggy days, or even after that, when lighter vehicles, machinery and loads were the rule.

Many are unsafe for school buses and other weighty vehicles such as commercial or farm trucks.

Our many miles of water are a blessing, but as all of us realize now, there are also some disadvantages. Replacements needs and costs are the chief ones.

VILLAGE LAW

Fighting litter is a worthy cause, and laws against littering are not uncommon.

It's the way that the village of Ocean Beach on New York's Fire Island went about it that shows how silly the law can become. All those frustrations caused by scattered paper wrappers for fast foods led to an ordinance against eating anything in public but ice cream cones. (Presumable nobody is allowed a paper napkin with a cone.)

Arrests have been made. A woman came before court for eating a crumb cake. A man hauled in for carrying a glass of water around.

The clean-up is on.

But the village mentality doesn't fit 20th century America. In medieval days when there were walls around towns, the local people could rule themselves according to whim. In this open country of 220 million people, there are no walls, only a Consitution. And it includes a variety of rights that may supersede an anti-littering law that forbids certain kinds of food in public.

The funny thing is, Fire Island is the last place you'd expect a law restraining free will.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Executive Suite's Viewpoint:
Says Unions' No 'Blessing'
And
Need No New Legal Powers

WASHINGTON -- Few industrialists know American labor -- and its leaders -- as knowledgeably, even intimately, as does Heath Larry who only recently left U.S. Steel to direct the NAM which has 13,000 affiliated companies employing some 15 million workers. Last month I asked the AFL-CIO's second-in-command, Lane Kirkland, George Meany's heir--apparent, for his comments on the fiercely fought "Labor Law Reform Bill." So even-handedly I asked Larry for his own opinion. Here it is:

By Heath Larry

President, Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers

People ask me why in the world I am advocating defeat of the labor law reform proworked out between the administration and the AFL-CIO. They want to know if I am one of those "union busters" that George Meany talks about.

Hardly. I have dealt with unions -- honorably and fairly -- for forty years. But nothing about that experience convinces me that unions are such an unmitigated blessing that they ought to be shoehorned into employment situations whether or not they are wanted or needed -- and that is what I believe these proposals would do.

Now, I know Mr. Meany has his list of "enemies" -- a list which comprises five or six companies which have been accused of being as callous to the requirements of law as many unions have been. But that's no reason to change our labor law into an organizaing tool for big unions.

Employes have many reasons for wanting to remain out of the unions. They must have -- or three out of four wouldn't have stayed out all these years. Some employes -- particularly those in smaller units -- feel that their opportunity for communicating back and forth with their employer is quite satisfactory; they don't need a union interposed between him and them. Others may have looked around and seen that if they are searching for industrial democracy, there are a few unions which have been just as lacking in it as any employer. others may worry -- and not without justification -- that the union which represents them may insist upon imposing a pattern settlement on their work condition which just might price them out of the job market.

I think we ought to bear in mind that most of the employe units that we are now talking about are generally pretty small. The big units, in the main, got organized years ago. The mass-producing industries had become sufficiently large and complex so that communications between employes and their employers deteriorated. There was a need for a mechanism by which to restore dignity, so much so that employer resistance couldn't stop it. I think any impartial analysis would have to recognize that the impact of unionization in these earlier days was often constructive.

But those situations in which organization has not taken root in succeeding years are different; they are probably situations where the employment conditions are quite good rather than reflecting evil employers who have bludgeoned their employes into submission.

So I can't see how the public interest will be served by further tilting the balance which presently exists in the labor law as to give big unions additional leverage against small employers. If I were a union organizer, I am sure I could use the new tools provided in the proposed law to sweep through a large portion of the unorganized -- and in a very short order.

Picture a small employer confronted with an election petition under rules which say that election will happen within 15 days unless there is some serious problem. He probably doesn't know whether he has a problem or not; his first major problem is probably to find a lawyer who can tell him what his problems are: peculiarly enough, the proposals don't contemplate any such quickie elections. Unless the union feels it has caught the employer napping and has a majority all sewed up -- having been exposed to only the union's side of the story. If the union has any doubts, the proposed law provides for a longer period of time.

And then, can you imagine the disciplinary difficulties in running a plant during an organizing campaign, if discharging an employe becomes virtually impossible -- even if justified -- because compulsory reinstatement will be ordered by the Board? And next, can you imagine the impact if the small employers could be forced into situations where they must risk having big-industry wages applied to them -- applied to them by the NLRB -- before the negotiations are complete?

These are only some of the problems:

One of the great concerns of this nation must be the current trend rate in inflation. And, unfortunately, major unions have never been a moderating influence on inflation. The cost of living clauses on which they have insisted in the last decade have constantly recycled the worst inflation aberrations which have occurred in the economy. Nor, unfortunately, have large unions ever made any notable contributions to improving the economy's efficiency.

Thus, I can't think of anything which would produce a greater boost to the existing inflationary bias in the economy than to have this law passed, and to give the unions the additional leverage which they would achieve as a result of it.

I hold no brief for an employer who will frustrate the free right of employe choice -- whether by threats or false promises or by resort of unfair labor practices. We can't condone unconscionable delays.

I do not contend there have been no abuses by employers under the present law. But there have been fully as many abuses by unions. If we are going to take a look at the law at all, then we ought to take a look at all of it, particularly provisions which could insure employe rights, as is the case in the bills proposed by Sens. Griffin, Hatch and Tower and by Reps. Ashbrook and Erlenborn.

So, my plea is that we keep a fair balance. If any tilt is made, let it be toward protection of employe rights -- not toward the enlargement of union privileges.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Government Manual Offers Buggers Advice on Bugging

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - President Carter, who did his share of hand-wringing over the wiretapping of the Nixon era, has now found himself in possession of a government handbook on wiretapping.

This handy, easy-to-read manual could instruct any enterprising snoop with a set of tools how to eavesdrop on telephone conversations. The White House is embarrassed. The telephone company is horrified.

Still, the Carter disciples are caught in a dilemma. It seems the taxpayers coughed up $47,000 for the instructions on how to wiretap.

It is contrary to the president's spirit of candor and sense of economics to deprive the taxpayers of the information they paid for.

The Office of Telecommunications Policy, which paid for the handbook, was all set to release it for the enlightenment of those who might be interested in the refinements of eavesdropping. But the telephone company raised a howl. American Telephone & Telegraph, one source confided, "is scared to death about too many people finding out about this."

The aggrieved phone company, therefore, urgently alerted Vice President Walter Mondale to the danger. AT & T president Charles Brown warned Mondale in a confidential letter that the wiretap manual "tells how to intercept suburban residential telephones, business data communication ... and the interstate long-distance network ... It tells the reader how to locate, open, tap into, reseal and rebury our cables for the purpose of intercepting customers' communications."

White House officials, putting discretion ahead of candor, have placed the 13-page, how-to-do-it handbook under lock and key. It is now being handled with the same delicate care as nitroglycerin.

The repercussions, meanwhile, have already reached Capitol Hill. Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who uncovered the manual, is eager to know more about the government's wiretap ways. Apparently, the government has been so careless about privacy that it planned to publish the wiretapping instructions. Yet Moss has been denied access to the phone records of past intelligence wiretaps by the White House. Congressional investigators suspect that some of these were really Watergate-style political wiretaps.

It remains a matter of dispute, meanwhile, why the wiretapping instructions were written. An official of the Mitre Corporation, which produced the manual, told us: "We were reluctant to produce anything that could be labeled as a cookbook on wiretapping recipes, but we were asked to do it by the White House."

The White House telecommunications chief, William Thaler, insisted he had informed Mitre explicitly that he didn't want a how-to-do-it book. "There must have been some confusion at the working level," he suggested. Nevertheless, he was ready to release the report until White House science adviser Frank Press urgently intervened.

"This report can lead to much mischief," Press told our associate Howie Kurtz. "The government never should have asked for it." Now White House officials are trying to figure out how to get around the Freedom of Information laws and keep the pamphlet secret.

However, we have obtained a copy of the handbook, which is stamped "Controlled Distribution." We agree with White House aides that it would not be in the public interest to publish the technical details. But there are some general eavesdropping instructions that are worth printing for their entertainment value.

For example, an "interceptor" who might wish to overhear the telephone conversations in a suburban residence, say, "in Northern Virginia between 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. Monday through Friday" is given 11 steps to take. First, he should "climb pole." Upon this lofty perch, suitable also for peeking into second-story windows, he will find a "terminal enclosure." He is instructed to jiggle the appropriate wires; then a tape recorder is recommended for monitoring the intercepted conversation.

President Carter's admonitions on economy, if not privacy, are reflected in the instructions. To "save tape," the eavesdropper is advised that "the tape could be immediately erased if the conversation was not of interest."

For the more ambitious spy who might wish to intercept microwave radio signals, the instructions recommend that he "acquire the use of a small farm along the route." Then he should "set up radio interception equipment, including a sufficiently large antenna, in a barn to avoid being observed."

Pentagon Party: A large defense contractor is throwing a bash for its Pentagon buddies today in Maryland. Watkins-Johnson and Co. is spending up to $40,000, our sources say, on an elaborate affair for bigwigs from the Defense Department, CIA and National Security Agency.

The brass hats will view the company's new equipment as they munch on hot hors d'oeuvres. The firm has even gotten a one-day liquor license to keep the Pentagon people in high spirits. But the executives aren't just being friendly; their company has been awarded $9.5 million in defense contracts this year.

Watkins-Johnson charged a token admission price last year to avoid criticism that it was currying favor with its Pentagon benefactors. But a company spokesman wouldn't discuss the affair with us, snorting: "That is our business and no one else's." When our reporter Valerie Strauss asked one official how she could get an invitation, he said, "You have to do business with us."

Corn growers sue USDA

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The National Corn Growers Association has filed suit in U.S. District Court in an effort to get the U.S. Department of Agriculture to impose tariffs and import fees on foreign sugar.

"The value of 1976 and 1977 corn crops have been depressed from $250 million to $350 million because the Carter Administration has not carried out the explicit mandate of Congress," charged Donald Schlichte, executive vice president of the NCGA.

"The USDA is offering direct payment subsidies to cane and beet growers, but completely ignoring the economic impact upon corn sweeteners," he said.

Named as defendants in the suit filed late Thursday are Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland, the Commodity Credit Corporation of the USDA, and Ray Fitzgerald, the executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The NCGA is headquartered in Boone, Iowa, and has about 8,500 members in 47 states.

Schlichte said corn growers joined in a coalition with beet and cane growers and processors to get the new sugar price support legislation enacted. He said they had assurances from Congress that the measure would bolster prices in the marketplace and protect corn growers as well as beet and cane growers.

Instead, said Schlichte, the USDA deferred immediate application of tariffs and import fees and invoked a direct-payment subsidy plan for beet and cane processors.

Nobel economics prize to 2

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1977 Nobel Economics Prize was awarded today to James Meade of England and Bertil Ohlin of Sweden "for their pathbreaking contributions to the theory of international trade and international capital movements."

Meade, 70, a professor at Cambridge University, is a pioneer in the study of trade development, welfare and other areas. He laid the theoretical basis for customs unions and wrote such fundamental works as "The Theory of International Economic Policy."

Ohlin was a Swedish commerce minister in the 1940s and is a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences, which selected the joint Nobel winners.

The relatively new economics prize has been dominated by Americans since it was established in 1969. Six Americans have won the award, the most recent Chicago economist Milton Friedman.

Carter, Torrijos confer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, met for more than 90 minutes today in an effort to put to rest some of the controversy swirling around the proposed Panama Canal treaty.

The two leaders adjourned their White House working session, originally scheduled to last about an hour, without immediately issuing a joint statement. One was expected later, however.

Carter had told a news conference Thursday that a "clarifying statement" might be needed on the major point in dispute — conflicting interpretations of the provision for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense of the canal's neutrality after the year 2000.

Abortion debate resumes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are resuming their fight over the nation's abortion policy after making sure the deliberations won't tie up salaries for thousands of federal employes.

Both houses agreed Thursday to a resolution that will provide money for several agencies until the end of the month while disagreements that are blocking passage of their regular appropriations bills are settled. President Carter signed the measure into effect Thursday night.

Bank has $1 million missing

CHICAGO (AP) — Was it an embezzlement, a burglary or just an accounting error? Apparently no one knows for sure how exactly $1 million in cash disappeared from the underground vault of the country's ninth largest bank.

But a spokesman for the First National Bank of Chicago said not one customer "is going to lose a penny."

Homer J. Holland, senior vice president in charge of administration, said the apparent loss has been charged against the bank's third-quarter earnings, which still are expected to exceed last year's third-quarter earnings.

The apparent loss is the biggest in the history of the bank, Holland said. He added that the bank, second largest in Illinois, has insurance for such losses, but the deductible is greater than the amount missing.

When the bank closed Friday for the three-day Columbus Day weekend, the $1 million was in a locked cart inside a vault, officials said. But at the day's-end accounting of cash on Tuesday, the bank's head teller found that the money was gone, Holland said.

$15 million ransom demanded

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Arab-speaking terrorists holding a hijacked West German jetliner threatened today to kill their hostages, including 11 West German beauty queens, unless "comrades" imprisoned in West Germany and Turkey are released and a $15 million ransom is paid, officials said.

Ninety-two persons, including crew members and the hijackers, were reported aboard the plane. The beauty queens were returning to Frankfurt from a gift trip to the Spanish island of Mallorca when the plane was hijacked Thursday.

The hijackers also threatened that kidnaped West German industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer, abducted by terrorists in West Germany nearly six weeks ago, would be killed if the demands are not met by 4 a.m. EDT Sunday.

A text of the ultimatum was delivered to the French press agency AFP in Paris after the plane with landed in this Persian Gulf emirate.

The ultimatum named 11 West German terrorists and two Palestinians held in Turkey who are demanding to be released and flown to Vietnam, Somalia or Marxist South Yemen. Each of the released prisoners was to be supplied with $43,860 in German marks.

PSC chairman will resign

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale says he will begin a search immediately to find a successor for Missouri Public Service Commission Chairman James Mulvaney.

But the governor, who swept into office on the pledge that he would end what he claimed was utility domination of the PSC, says he does not feel pressured to find a replacement for Mulvaney since the PSC chief has agreed to continue serving until a successor is named.

"Vacancies are a way of life for a government like ours," Teasdale said.

Mulvaney, 43, considered the leading consumer voice on the commission, announced Thursday that he would resign to become a regional field representative for the U.S. Department of Labor in Kansas City.

He will serve as a liaison on all department matters with state, local and community leaders in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

LILBOURN— Numerous activities have been planned for Saturday and Monday in the fundraising campaign to send the Lilbourn High School Band to the Mardi Gras Parade in New Orleans, La., next February.

Within the past two weeks, through various activities and donations, $2,287 of the $7,500 goal has been reached.

80-county survey indicates Scott County health status in top 13

Despite the expected population decrease of nearly 1,000 persons expected for Scott County in the next 15 years, the overall health status for the area is higher than most of the 80 counties surveyed, according to a recent publication of The Mid South: A Regional Profile.

Out of the 80 counties, Scott county ranked 13th on the list as having the best overall health record. New Madrid, Pemiscot and Mississippi Counties ranked 71st, 73rd, and 74th, respectively.

On the basis of 13 health-related indicators, the 80 counties were ranked from best to worst, based on social and demographic data, to find an index of comparable health statistics. Population is a major factor of health facilities available for use.

Scott County in 1975 had a population 35,200. That, according to the study, is expected to drop to 34,358 in 1990 but rise to 40,492 by the year 2000. Only Butler county, which is expected to increase in population from 36,700 to 44,328 in the next 15 years, gains population in Southeast Missouri.

The study further says that southeast Missouri, including Butler, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Ripley, Scott and Stoddard counties, has a total population of nearly 212,100, which is projected to fall to 199,000 in 1990, but rise by 223,368 in the year 2000. The projections are based primarily on past population trends with other factors, such as local economies, etc. included.

Overall, Southeast Missouri is expected to increase only 5.3 percent in population between now and the end of the century, which is far behind the other areas in the study, with the single exception of eastern Arkansas.

The shortage of medical personnel, especially physicians, is a major factor in the level of health care one can receive in Scott County, and other regions of the Mid-South. Southeast Missouri and North Mississippi have the lowest physician to people ratio of 1 to 1,670 and 1 to 1,666, respectively.

The national shortage of physicians is found in the Mid-South where many counties have these deficits. In 1974, the nation had a physician to people ratio of one to 565 people compared to a one to 982 in the Mid-South in 1975.

Despite the realization that the shortage will increase in the future, optimistic developments may include, a trend back to family practice, more interest in rural practice and new governmental programs to end the shortage.

Missouri Delta Hospital in Sikeston is termed as one of the secondary care centers in the Mid-South that draws from 90 smaller health institutions outside the Memphis, Tenn. area.

Memphis is known as the medical center of the Mid-South region, and supported by these smaller institutions, it offers all levels of service with an emphasis on specialized care.

In recent years, however, there has been a consolidation of hospital facilities in the Mid-South. The number of short-stay hospitals decreased 8.8 per cent since 1970. The number of beds has, however, increased by 1,700 or 10.6 per cent since 1975.

A low income level is partly responsible for the Mid-South's decreasing health status. The long-time dependence on farming and lack of industrialization can be termed largely responsible.

The region still lags behind in income as a whole and those who relied on cotton in the past, especially the Delta areas of Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri were in the lower income bracket.

Despite the decrease in income, Scott County was among four other counties in 1972 to record per capita incomes of over $3,000. Shelby County, Tenn., was by far the most affluent of the region's 80 counties, with a per capita income of $3,533.

Education is also an important factor of health care, because it is an indirect measure of whether an individual can pay for his health expenses. There is also a direct relationship between education and both knowledge of and attitude toward the health care delivery system.

Southwest Missouri has one of the lowest ratings of residents who have completed schooling. Southwest Kentucky residents completed 10.7 yeasrs of school, West Tennessee 11.8. Memphis has the best record of 11.7 completed school years. Even though the health situation has decreased because of the lack of physicians, causes also stem from income and education. Southeast Missouri will also stay behind in health care with the rest unless steps can be taken to first prevent the minor problems which lead to something major.

Judge accused of misconduct

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A state agency is investigating 17 complaints of misconduct against a south-central Missouri Circuit court judge, according to published reports.

The Springfield Daily News Thursday quoted unnamed sources saying the Missouri Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline of Judges would hear complaints against Judge Winston V. Buford of the 37th Circuit at a meeting Nov. 14 in St. Louis.

The six-member panel makes recommendations to the Missouri Supreme Court on disciplining state judges.

Neither Buford, 48, of Eminence, nor his attorney Eugene Walsh would comment on the allegations.

But the newspaper said it had learned that Walsh filed a legal document asking the Supreme Court to block the commission hearing on the grounds that the judge had not been properly notified of the charges against him.

The newspaper said Buford included a partial response to the complaints in a letter filed with the request.

Safety measure: no matter how much you enjoy really rare roast beef, make sure the meat is roasted to an internal temperature of 145 degrees.

Fast cooks like to use cream cheese, melted over very low heat or over hot water, as a sauce for vegetables. To thin the sauce, add two tablespoons of milk when you use a 3-ounce package of the cream cheese.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader asks for first born rerun

Dear Ann Landers: It has been three years since you have had the article on an essay that put each child in his place. It was sent to you by a reader who found it in the library stuck between two books. I have had it on my refrigerator door and it's pretty tattered by this time.

Will you please give it a rerun? The date was Sept. 26, 1974.

Many thanks. -- Mrs. R. In Hialeah, Fla.

Dear Friend: Thanks for asking. The author of that essay is my good friend -- that talented lady, Erma Bombeck. Isn't she the greatest?

Here it is -- with pleasure:

Dear First Born: I've always loved you best because you were our first miracle. You were the genesis of a marriage and the fullfillment of young love.

You sustained us through hamburger years, the first apartment (furnished in Early Poverty), our first mode of transportation (1955 Feet) and the 7-inch TV we paid on for 36 months.

You were new and had unused grandparents and enough clothes for a set of triplets. You were the original model for a mom and a dad who were trying to work the bugs out. You got the strained lamb, the open safety pins and three-hour naps.

You were the beginning.

Dear Middle Child: I've always loved you best because you drew a tough spot in the family and it made you stronger for it.

You cried less, had more patience, wore faded hand-me-downs and never in your life did anything first. But it only made you more special. You were the one we relaxed with and realized a dog could kiss you and you wouldn't get sick. You could cross a street by yourself long before you were old enough to get married. And you helped us understand the world wouldn't collapse if you went to bed with dirty feet.

You were the child of our busy, ambitious years. Without you we never could have survived the job changes and the tedium and routine that is marriage.

To The Baby: I've always loved you best because while endings are generally sad, you are such a joy. You readily accepted the milk-stained bibs, the lower bunk, the cracked baseball bat, the baby book that had nothing written in it except a recipe for graham-cracker piecrust that someone had jammed between the pages.

You are the one we held onto so tightly. You are the link with our past, a reason for tomorrow. You quicken our steps, square our shoulders, restore our vision and give us a sense of humor that security, maturity and durability can't provide.

When your hairline takes on the shape of Lake Erie and your own children tower over you, you will still be our baby. -- A Mother

Dear Ann Landers: Help! I've been invited to a double wedding. The brides are cousins. I know one of the girls very well. The other is no more than a passing acquaintance.

Am I expected to buy both brides a wedding gift? Please answer. I've asked several people and have gotten a lot of conflicting advice. -- Double Or What?

Dear D Or W: Both brides should receive a gift, but for the one you know slightly a much more modest present will do.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

One of the newest fashion categories is "survival gear." Rugged, practical and good-looking in its down-to-earth design, this jacket from the Pro Action collection by Campus is an excellent example of such "gear." Its rip-stop nylon shell is puffed with down fill to keep you warm in the worst of weather. But Campus gives more than the basics! The jacket has both snap closures and a two-way zipper. Big patch pockets have Velcro closings, cuffs are adjustable and the hood snaps on and off. There's even a patch pocket on the inside! You can't find a more practical jacket and now it's in style, too!

Golfers end season

KENNETT — Coach Rosalie Snider was pleased as her young glofers returned from district competition to beat Kennett there. The win was led by Betsy Sikes who continued to out stroke the rivals. She was low among all linksters with a 52.

The final score of the match saw Sikeston win by seven strokes, 218 to 225.

Kennett scorers were led by Debby Tate who shot a 54. She was followed by Lee Ann Woodward's 55, Laura Legan's 57, and Lee Ann Hall's 59.

Sikeston's totals behind Sikes's 52 were Paulette Mather's 55, Lana Adam's 54, and Lee Ann Jones's 57.

Woods to play vs. OU

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma and Missouri, healthier than they've been all year, will play before a sellout crowd of 63,500 Saturday in the renewal of a traditionally fierce Big Eight football battle.

Kickoff is 1:30 p.m. CDT.

The last time Oklahoma was in Columbia, Joe Washington bolted 71 yards for a touchdown and lunged across the edge of the goalline for the two-point conversion to give the Sooners a 28-70 triumph.

Last year's 27-20 victory in Norman, preserved with a lastminute pass interception, was Oklahoma's seventh straight triumph over the Tigers.

Both are coming off tough losses. Oklahoma lost on points to border rival Texas and dropped to No. 7 in the national poll. Missouri, off to its most miserable start in many years, was nipped by Iowa State, 7-0, for the Tigers fourth loss in five starts.

But for the first time all year, the Tigers will have a healthy Pete Woods at quarterback, James Taylor at offensive tackle and Chris Garlich at linebacker.

The only good news from Oklahoma's Texas game was that for the first time all year the Sooners all came away healthy.

Jr. High gridders still unbeaten

POPLAR BLUFF — The coaches of Sikeston's 8th and 9th grade football teams stated that it was awfully hard to beat Poplar Bluff. This was expecially true when you have to travel and meet them on thier home field. However, their pregame fears were put to rest as Sikeston scored a big double win that left both teams undefeated.

"Our offense didn't do much," commented 8th grade coach Mike Foster, "but we did more than they did." This in reference to his lads winning the first game of the double header 6-0.

The 9th graders, led by Coaches George Hale and Martin Bass, had a little more to show.

"They're about the strongest team we've faced," said Hale after his 20-8 win. "We progress a little bit each game, and that's what we like to see,"

The improvement this week was a steady offense that drove the ball right at Bluff. All three SHS touchdowns came as the culmination of long drives.

Undra Lane opened the scoring in the first quarter with a two yard plunge. Quarterback Scott McDowell popped over for the two-pointer and Sikeston led 8-0.

Halfback Edwin Beasley added the second Sikeston tally in the third quarter as he raced in from four yard out. Extra point, no good.

The final SHS tally came in the fourth period when quarterback Mike Sherman scored on a one yard sneak. Once again the extra point was no good.

The Mules got on the boards with less than two minutes left in the game. A forty-yard flea flicker got them down to Sikeston's ten, and three plays later they scored. The pass for the conversion was good, but too little too late. (This was the first time this year Sikeston has been scored on.)

For the 8th graders, Steve Green and Nick Garner produced the onlyy offense needed. In the second quarter, quarterback Steve Green rolled out and hit Garner with a pass good for 75 yards and the score. The attempt for two was no good, but it didn't really matter.

The stingy defense of Sikeston, led by tackle John Chandler, was not in the mood let Bluff score.

Both teams will defend their unbeaten records as they host Cape Central Saturday, October 22. The game will played at Public School Stadium with a 9:30 a.m. kickoff time.

Volleyball team wins second match in a row

CAPE GIRARDEAU — To say that Coach Janie Merrick was pleased with her volleyball squad would be an understatement. "They looked like a whole different team!" exclaimed Merrick. "I'm really proud of the way playing."

These comments came after the SHS girl's volleyballers were able to win their second straight match as they downed the young ladies from University High of Cape Girardeau.

Sikeston raced out to win the first game by a 15-8 bulge. In the second, Merrick used her reserves who fell 15-0. Then, in the rubber game of the match, the ladies from SHS spiked their way to a 15-10 win.

"I really think we can hold our now," said Mesrick. Most of the tough Stoddard County teams are behind the ladies.

Their next match will be against thier final Stoddard County foe as the Spikers host Dexter.

SOCCER

NEW YORK — The owners of the North American Soccer League voted to accelerate the Americanization of the league. The NASL owners decided to limit the number of non-North American players a team can field at one time in a diminishing scale down to six by 1984.

During the 1977 season, teams were permitted to have 10 foreign players on the field at one time. In 1978 only nine will be permitted; eight in 1980; seven in 1982, and six in 1984, Commissioner Phil Woosnam said.

In a move affecting the 30-man roster, Woosnam said the clubs would reduce the total of non-citizens from 15 to 14 in 1978, 13 in 1980, 12 in 1982, 11 in 1984.

GOLF

PARIS — Britain's Nick Faldo fired a five-under-par 67 and grabbed a three-stroke lead after the opening round of the $45,000 Lancome Golf Tournament.

Yanks' Munson, Jackson at it again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The New York Yankees, one big, unhappy family, arrived in the land of the gossip hound and continued to tell tales out of school.

"We have a chance to win the World Series and there's one guy out there second-guessing the manager," said Yankee captain Thurman Munson. Munson was talking about teammate Reggie Jackson, who criticized Billy Martin for using a rusty Catfish Hunter as his second-game pitcher.

"I wouldn't be second-guessing the manager," added Munson, who has been hinting broadly that he wants to be traded to Cleveland, the closest major league city to his native Canton, Ohio.

Martin, not on the trading block but close to losing his job all season long, also felt Jackson's loose lip could sink the Yankee ship.

"Reggie's having enough trouble in right field to keep him from second-guessing the manager," said Martin, who clashed with Jackson and Yankee owner George Steinbrenner throughout the season. "We're in this World Series as a team. None of our players should be talking against their teammate or the manager."

Fifty years after the Yankees' Murderer's Row team spoke softly and carried big sticks, the 1977 Yankees, "Murmurer's Row," was speaking loudly and carrying small sticks.

Meanwhile, over on the other side of the field, the docile Dodgers were providing an interesting contrast, performing their version of "Love Story," an ongoing story of how 25 players and a rookie manager can actually win games without controversy.

The only thing similar about the Yankees and Dodgers is that they each have one victory going into Game 3 in the 1977 World Series tonight.

The Yankees will go with right-hander Mike Torrez, a 17game winner during the regular season, while the Dodgers trot out medical exhibit No. 1, Tommy John, whose rebuilt left arm brought Los Angeles 20 victories this year.

"If I've got a good sinker, everything will be all right," said Torrez, who is playing out his option and could be making his final appearance as a Yankee.

John is also a sinkerball specialist, but he says the big factor in his game will be his curveball.

"The key will be my ability to get my breaking ball over," said John, whose career was saved by a remarkable tendon transplant three years ago. "I've also got to have my good control and be able to change speeds."

The Dodgers won Wednesday night's second game at cavernous Yankee Stadium 6-1 with an awesome power display of four home runs. Dodger Stadium, a very friendly home for the National League champions, is a cozier ballpark.

"I've been trying to tell everybody how lucky I am," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "This club is built on love, spirit and togetherness.

TRICKY TASTE BUDS

Have you ever watched a bluegill approach a worm on a hook, touch it and then reject it without taking a bite?

Puzzling over how a fish could taste a bait without taking it into its mouth, the angling experts at Mercury outboards learned that most fish have taste buds which are located outside the body.

Almost all fish have taste buds in the lips and throat, but many others have specialized areas of the body, such as fins and along the side, which act as taste centers.

Wherever they are located on the fish, taste buds are small cells that open like flower blossoms to test food and send a signal to the brain.

If the taste is acceptable, the fish will likely take the food into its mouth.

A catfish has the most taste buds of any fish. More than 100,000 are located throughout its body.

The majority of these are found in the barbels, special taste organs which protrude from the chin and enable the catfish to detect small amounts of food as it digs up mud.

Fishermen take advantage of the catfish's sharp sense of taste by using baits which gradually dissolve in the water.

As the catfish tastes the bait from some distance away, it is aroused to search out the source of the food and is drawn to the hook.

Tastes vary among different kinds of fish.

Largemouth black bass prefer a fresh bait. A minnow hooked so that it is alive is good and will be eaten.

Bass will turn away from dead or contaminated food.

Gar, on the other hand, are scavengers and will eat almost anything, fresh or spoiled.

Cardinals drop punter Joyce; obtain Carrell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Terry Joyce, who spent long hours during the hot summer working to improve his form, hopes his toil will come back to haunt the St. Louis Cardinals.

"This is just surprising," said the 23-year-old punter, who was placed on waivers Thursday by the National Football League team. "Everybody thinks football is a glamor sport, but there are a lot of tough things."

The Cardinals' assistant operations director, Larry Wilson, said a blocked punt Joyce suffered during St. Louis' 30-24 loss to the Dallas Cowboys last week hurt the 6-foot-6 athlete's cause.

To replace Joyce, the team signed free agent Duane Carrell, who was released earlier this year by the New York Jets. Carrell, a fourth-season veteran, also previously kicked for Dallas, the Los Angeles Rams and the Jacksonville Sharks of the World Football League.

"They thought I was taking too much time, but I couldn't understand their logic," said Joyce, whose average this season was 38.7 yards on 22 punts.

"I cut down on my kicking steps," he said. "I had a good preseason — I was the leading punter. Of the 28 teams, I led the league in preseason. And I was like sixth going into Sunday's game."

Wilson described the 5-10 Carrell as a punter "who can get the ball off quickly. He's averaged about 40 yards and has had only one kick blocked in his career, and that's our main consideration right now."

Joyce, who was in his second NFL season, played quarterback for Highland (Kan.) Junior College. Later he was a tight end and punter at Missouri Southern before he was signed by the Cards as a free agent.

"I think maybe the Cardinals are looking for a scapegoat or something like that," said Joyce. "Maybe they thought they needed an escape for another week and then hope they'll start winning."

Area players lead Indians on defense

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Five games into the 1977 football season, southeast Missourians are leading the defensive efforts fo the SEMO State Indians.

Leading the Tribe in tackles are Alex Clinton, a 218 pound junior from Hayti, and Shane Wagoner, a 200 pound senior from Sikeston.

Clinton, who began the year as a defensive tackle, was moved to the nose position for some of SEMO's earlyy games after Tom McClanahan was injured. He has posted 42 tackles.

Right behind him with 41 stops in Wagoner, who plays a linebacker position for the Tribe.

Another Sikeston native, Jerry Dement, leads the team in assists with 27. The 170 pound junior defensive back ranks fourth in tackles with 29, which includes 12 stops in the Arkansas Tech contest.

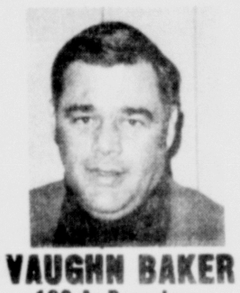

Steve Cash, a senior linebacker from Poplar Bluff, is second in assists with 25 and fifth in tackles with 26. Wagoner is third in assists with 24.

*The Tribe's other top stop-*per is not from southeast Missouri but he isn't far away. Don Davis, a 175 pound junior defensive back from Blytheville, Ark., has posted 29 tackles and 20 assists.

Kevin Hunt a senior from Markham, Ill., leads the team in interceptions with two. He has returned them for a total of 74 yards.

Others with one interception each include Gary Briley, Mike Gray, Don Porter, Dement, and Davis.

Mormon missionaries say branch may open here

Currently serving as missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon in the Sikeston area are Elders Kelly Brown of Vernal, Utah and J.B. Tempest of Lyone, Colo.

Both nearing the end of their two-year term as missionaries, Elder Brown came here about a month ago from his previous assingment in Chicago and central Illinois, while Elder Tempest arrived three weeks ago from assignments in the Lincoln Neb., and eastern Missouri areas.

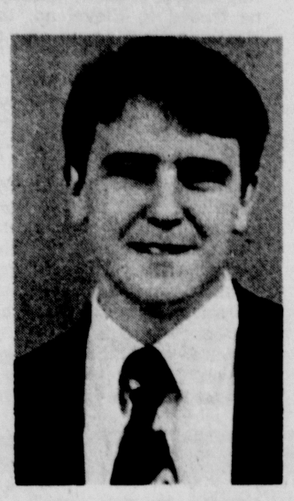

The young men indicated consideration is being given to establishing a branch of the mormon church in Sikeston if a suitable building can be obtained. The nearest branches presently are located in Dexter, Cape Girardeau and Hayti.

Brown 24, has 23 months of service and will complete his two-year term in November. Tempest, 20, has served 19 months.

While in the area, the two keep busy making door-to-door visits presenting the message of the Mormon Church, including information about modern day revelation and continuous scripture, and answering questions about the purpose of life. They also present couseling in the home designed to strengthen family life.

Brown said they are sometimes mistaken for "Moonies" (Unification Church) who sometimes go door to door selling items. Both he and Tempest stressed they do not attempt to raise money for the church.

Missionary service is not mandatory in the Mormon Church, and those who serve do so voluntarily and at their own expense. Most pay their expenses for the 24-month term from saving an dhelp from their families, with no financial assistance from the church. After their term ends, return to a life of their own choosing and are not obligated to full-time church service.

Brown whose hometown is and oil town about the size of Sikeston in northeastern Utah, worked in oil field and construction projects to raise funds for his missionary term. When it ends he plans to return to college and study business administration.

Tempest is from a small livestock town northwest of Denver. To pay his missionary expenses he worked for a natural gas pipeline. He wants to prepare for a mechanical designing career after his term ends.

Unlike a majority of the missionaries who have come to the Sikeston area, neither Brown nor Tempest have a long Mormon background. Brown was converted from another denomination about four years ago while living in Lubbock Tex. Tempest is from a non-Mormon family.

Nevertheless, both are enthusiastic about their church and eager to tell others of what it means in their life.

While in Sikeston , they are living at 823 Park Ave. and may be reached at telephone number 471-7956 (mostly in the morning) if anyone wants information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or desires family counseling.

insight

by Larry Swaim

Each of us must, from time to time, turn our attention inward and carefully evaluate ourselves. This self evaluation should be done regularly so that each of us can keep a careful check on ourselves. I Corinthians 13:5, "Examine your own selves whether you are in the faith, prove your own selves." I Corinthians 11:28, "But let a man prove himself and so let him eat of the bread and drink of the cup." In the last scripture reference, the Lord indicates that a man should look inward each time he takes communion to make sure that his life is reflecting the actions and attitudes of Christ. Truthfully, a wise man will carefully study his own behaviour and make regular evaluations and corrections.

Most people find it difficult to see the bad in themselves. It is difficult to be honest with ourselves, yet, before we have a right to criticize others, we must take a critical look at ourselves. Jesus taught that we should remove the log from our own eye so that we can better see the splinter in out brother's eye. It is easy to deceive ourselves. "They themselves measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves with themselves, are without understanding." I Corinthians 10:12. A common mistake is to look at ourselves as the standard by which we judge others; actions, but the Bible should be that standard by which we judge ourselves and others. The words of the old Negro spiritual, "Everybody talkin' 'bout Heaven ain't gwine there," are true words. One of the first steps in spritual self evaluation is to realize that we may be blind to our own faults; that we may have a distorted view of ourselves. The word of the poet, Robert Burns, may serve as an effective guideline: "O, that God the gift would give us, To see ourselves as others see us."

After the 10:30 a.m. service, congregation recessed with the acolytes, layreader and clergy to the parish house, where the great hall, the kitchen and the classrooms were blessed.

Chronological study of Christ's life opens

A series of chronological study of the life of Christ opened Wednesday nght at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St., and will continue each Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock for an indefinite period.

The teacher for the study series is the Rev. Clyde L. Riddle, pastor, who has conducted similar studies on many occasions during his ministry as a pastor and college Bible instructor.

Based on all material presented in the Bible about Christ, the study will follow the events of His life as they occurred chronologically as near, as possible, rather than the order in which they are presented in the Four Gospels of the New Testament.

As a background for understanding the conditions under which Christ entered the world, the Old Testament in relation to his coming was summarized in the opening session. Next Wednesday night, material will be presented on the events that transpired in the interval between the end of the Old Testament and the beginning of the New Testament, prior to up a study of Christ's life.

No. 21. Jesus Feeds the Multitudes

After Jesus heard the news of John the Baptist's execution, he went alone into a deserted area, but the people followed him. When Jesus saw the multitude, he felt compassion and began to heal the sick.

"And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals. But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves and two fishes. He said, Bring them hither to me." (Matthew 14:15-18)

"And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass; and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed, and brake; and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full." (Matthew 14:19-20)

Catholic teen-agers plan area get-together

ORAN -- Catholic teen-agers from Oran and Chaffee are completing plans for the "1977 Getting Together" program coming up Oct. 23 Catholic Church here.

The planning team includes Donna Hess, Sara Eftink, J.C. Brucher and Martha Eftink from St. Ambrose Catholic Church in Chaffee and Janice Welter, Janet Kluesner, Kenny Eftink, Betty Gaines and Danny Ressel from Guardian Angels Parish in Oran. Don Emge, the religious education coordinator for the two parishes, is coordinating the planning.

In 1973, David and Doris Eftink of Scott City got the idea of "getting a whole group of kids together and showing everybody that we care." At a time when a lot of people were putting teens down, this young couple decided to let the teens prove otherwise. That first year 430 teens showed up.

Since then, the "getting Together" has been held at Notre Dame High School in 1974, at Sikeston in 1975 and in Leopold last year. The attendance for all previous years has averaged around 450. The peak year was 1974 when 600 youths showed up.

Registration for this year's program will begin at 1 p.m. Oct. 23. The activities will begin with a songfest at 2 p.m.

The teens will then be able to sign up for two worshops. There will be six workshops to choose from, including such topics as sexuality, contemporary music and Christian commitment.

Two of the workshops, one led by a panel of priests and the other by a panel of teens, will allow the participants to raise whatever questions they want.

After the workshops, everyone will gather for a celebration of the Eucharist. A meal will then be provided by the St. Anne's Sodality of Guardian Angels Parish. A dance will conclude the day's activities, with the music provided by the Eddy Martin Sound System.

Churches under pressure to practice what they preach

NEW YORK (AP) — American churches are under spreading pressure to put in practice themselves what they've preached to others — the right of workers to organize for collective bargaining.

The demand for union representation has come from church employes in some Protestant and Roman Catholic institutions. In essence, the church bodies involved have voiced willingness to accept it.

But it's creating strains, economically and philosophically.

It's also compelling "the church to face its relations to its own social doctrine," says the Rev. Patrick Farrell of Washington, D.C., the U. S. Roman Catholic bishops' representative for parochial schools.

Although the major, historic churches, both Protestant and Catholic, have long supported the right of workers to form unions to represent their interests, church workers are among the last labor groups still largely unorganized.

"In a sense, it's a new frontier," observes James A. Hamilton, an attorney and associate general secretary of the National Council of Churches, whose nonsupervisory employes are planning a vote on union representation.

"Churches have talked about labor rights through the years, and perhaps the irony of church employes remaining unorganized is simply that nobody has picked up the ball to organize them," adds Hamilton, a United Methodist.

In any case, the unionizing moves have arisen not only among workers for the interdenominational organization of Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, but have spread increasingly among teachers in Catholic schools.

A U.S. Catholic bishops subcommittee on the matter on Sept. 15 affirmed that in keeping with long-time church teachings supporting labor rights, church employes are entitled to organize and bargain collectively.

But the statement also points out that church employes are part of a "community of faith, formed by Gospel values, whose purpose is service to others."

The church always has held up that idealistic commitment, rather than high pay, as a main motivation for its workers. For it, Catholic clergy and sisters take vows of poverty, and Protestant clergy similarly accept wage levels below what comparable education would command in other fields.

Churches also are in a nonprofit category, their limited resources for schools and other programs dependent on freewill offerings.

Both circumstances — differing from the ordinary commercial-industrial world — make for church difficulties in adjusting to negotiations with unions of church workers.

"It's tough to apply the principle," says Catholic Bishop Joseph A. McNicholas of Springfield, Ill., cochairman of the bishops subcommittee and also head of the U.S. Catholic Conference social-development committee.

"But principle is principle, and we stand behind it."

Already unions have formed among lay teachers in Catholic high schools in 19 dioceses, and also include clergy teachers in Columbus and Youngstown, Ohio, and elementary-secondary parochial teachers in Columbus and New York City.

Movements are under way for unions elsewhere, with it still uncertain among Catholic women's orders whether nuns should be included. They are, in some cases.

Parochial schools in the past were mainly staffed by nuns and clergy in vows, on minimal pay, but parochial teachers have become predominantly laity in recent times, bringing demands for unions, contractual conditions and better pay.

According to a poll, Americans consider these words among the most beautiful in the language: dawn, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, luminous, golden, melody.

Association has nothing to hide, Billy Graham says

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Billy Graham says his evangelistic association has nothing to hide, has done nothing illegal or immoral and will begin issuing annual reports disclosing how it spends up to $25 million in yearly contributions.

Graham, whose organization is headquartered in Minneapolis, told a news conference Thursday that the question of disclosure for religious organizations had not really come up until this year.

"And no churches or churchrelated organizations are required by law to do so," Graham said. "But the mood of the country is moving in that direction, and I think we will gladly conform to it."

The Graham organization recently has been criticized by the Better Business Bureau for failing to provide prospective contributors with information on how money is spent.

"At the proper time, we will be fully cooperative," Graham said at the news conference.

"My job is to do the spiritual, ministry," Graham added."I give myself to preaching and writing."

He said the association's board and executive committee have handled financial details and the board will decide, at a weekend meeting, what to disclose. A Graham aide said an announcement is expected next week.

"When people give to our association, they trust that it's being handled properly and wisely and invested for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, which all of it is," Graham said.

He added that "the Gospel is free but the bucket you carry the Gospel in costs money."

Graham broadcasts on hundreds of radio and television stations, publishes a three-million circulation magazine, circulates 100 films and has eight evangelistic teams which have carried crusades to all continents. The association employs 500 people, 400 of them in the Minneapolis headquarters.

Graham also tried to clear up suggestions that his organization had kept secret a $23 million World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund.

He said the secrecy was caused by the news media's inattention, not his design.

"That fund has been as public as we could make it, but nobody's been willing to print anything about it until now," he said. "There's nothing illegal, immoral or unethical about that fund — in fact, we're proud of it." Recently, Graham said the fund had been first revealed in 1971 but that he had not publicized its growth to $23 million for fear it would bring a flood of requests for grants.

Women ministers see no problems in role

By JIM KOFSKI
Associated Press Writer

The Rev. Nancy Scarff, one of two women ministers serving parishes in North Dakota, says she finds no advantage in her sex or her age — 27 — as associate pastor at Faith United Methodist Church in Williston.

Instead, she stresses "just being a different person. I think every individual has different things to offer."

The Rev. Eve Hook, 33, associate pastor at McCabe United Methodist Church in Bismarck, agrees.

"I do not feel I'm the only one who has a ministry just because I'm ordained," she said. "I feel everyone in the congregation has a vital role. I feel I should help them see those possibilities in themselves and help them carry them out."

The Rev. Scarff said assuming her parish duties "wasn't awkward at all."

"At times, it gets frustrating, being new," she said. "You're often aware that it's a new thing by people's curiosity. But people are very accepting."

"It's been pretty much a joy," the Rev. Hook said. "The parishioners have reacted really beautifully toward me.

"I sometimes feel on display, which creates pressure," she added. "You're on display both for being a minister and for being a woman. Occasionally you get a little tired of it. You just want to be a person who happens to be a minister."

The Rev. Scarff, ordained a deacon last year and eligible to be ordained an elder this spring, said she finds "just getting to know people and participating in life with them" the most rewarding part of her ministry.

She said she is not focusing on a single ministry and added, "One stereotype we're trying to get away from is that only women work well with youth and children."

The Rev. Hook, ordained an elder in 1974, said, "I tend to find most of my rewards with one-to-one relationships and feel that I probably work best in that area."

Both ministers see an advantage in their single status.

"There's a lot of single people, and maybe I'll have more ability to minister to single people than if I were married," the Rev. Scarff said.

"I am a divorced person, and I don't try to hide that," the Rev. Hook said. "So I've found that I could use some of that experience in relating to some persons in our own congregation who are going through divorces and having a rough time that way."

The Rev. Scarff said the Methodist Church had been ordaining women since 1956 and now counted some 500 women among its ministers. She said she would encourage others to enter the ministry.

Panel wants Baptist colleges to pull out of subsidy system

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — A committee of the Missouri Baptist Convention has recommended that four Baptist colleges withdraw from the state's system of tuition subsidies because of state guidelines banning religious discrimination in hiring.

The committee's recommendation will be taken up at the convention's annual meeting Oct. 24 in Springfield.

William Jewell College in Liberty, Southwest Baptist College at Bolivar, Hannibal-LaGrange College at Hannibal and Missouri Baptist College at St. Louis could be affected.

The committee recommended that the colleges withdraw from the Missouri tuition grant program by 1981 unless the state drops a prohibition against religious discrimination in the hiring of administrators, faculty and staff.

State grants of up to $700 a year are available to students attending private colleges in Missouri.

Chuck Rainbolt, student government president at William Jewell said some students who are outstanding academically might not attend the college if the state aid program were rejected. "Should we withdraw from that program we are going to turn into an institution that just baby-sits kids."

The committee recommended that the schools not accept money if it required them to change from their distinctive Baptist nature and purpose.

"I think it's pretty apparent that if the report is adopted by the convention the college will have to choose between complying and not complying," said Judge William E. Turnage, who is president of the William Jewell trustess and a member of the Missouri Court of Appeals.

The Missouri Constitution provides that state money shall not go to schools controlled by religious denominations or created to further a religious cause.

In August of 1976, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled that the tuition grants at private colleges were not themselves unconstitutional. It did not rule on how they are administered.

The state board which administers the grants renewed William Jewell's eligibility in November after it presented a statement that it has no written policy requiring religious descrimination in hiring employes.

Rejected hymnal may be published anyway

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The publishing arm of the Luthern Church-Missouri Synod plans to publish a new Lutheran hymnal in 1978, despite rejection of the hymnal by the synod at its July convention.

Concordia Publishing House in St. Louis said it still plans "at this time" to publish the new Lutheran Book of Worship. The hymnal will be published with Augsburg Publishing House of the American Lutheran Church and Fortress Press of the Lutheran Church in America.

At its biennial convention last July, the Missouri Synod withheld approval of the new hymnal, which had been developed jointly by four North American Lutheran churches.

The synod decided that a panel should evaluate the book and either recommend changes or advocate the start of work on a separate hymnal. The "blue ribbon panel" is to make its recommendations at the 1979 convention, but the hymnal is slated for publication next fall.

The Rev. Ralph Reinke, president of Concordia Publishing, said the firm "must keep our hand in."

"It is unclear at this time what the committee is going to do, and what our response should be," he said.

Reinke noted that the Missouri Synod still sends representatives to the Inter-Lutheran Commission on Worship, the body that drafted the hymnal. Therefore, he said the church is "still involved in the preparation of the book."

If it continues as joint publisher, Concordia will be able to distribute the hymnal to Lutheran congregations next fall. However, Missouri Synod congregations will not be permitted to make official use of the book unless it wins approval at a synod convention.

Parable of talents nets church $3,500

WILTON MANORS, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. John Stauffer put his money where his Bible was and instructed his parishioners to go forth and make money to air condition the church.

They went forth with a variety of raffles, sales — and one poker game. They madeth $3,500.

Re-enacting the New Testament parable of the talents, the Rev. Mr. Stauffer took out a $1,000 personal loan and gave $5 to each of his parishioners at the First Christian Church in this Fort Lauderdale suburb. The church is raising money for a $34,000 air conditioning system.

"It was a tremendous success," said the 27-year-old minister.

"The story in the parable was that all men are not equal according to their abilities," says Stauffer. "What makes them equal is their effort to use their talents to the fullest. That is what we are doing now in the church."

The Bible tells how a nobleman gave a silver coin, or talent, to each of three servants. Two servants returned with more than they were given and were rewarded, but a third saved his and was admonished.

In the re-enactment, parishioner Gordon Price used his talent, and connections as a meat supplier, to raffle off some steaks. Pooling his $5 with two other church members, Price returned $178 to the church.

C.J. Salerno, a cabinetmaker, used his $5 to build bird feeders, which he sold to net $78 for the church. "It was right up my alley," he said.

Two families combined $50 and held a bingo party — earning $163. Others sold homemade shell necklaces, tables, and other items. Two teen-aged girls turned their living room into a restaurant and sold $10 steak dinners.

sored by Senator Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

Keeling said today that while the change has lessened pressure on communities to join the flood insurance program, there is still plenty of pressure that can be exerted by Washington.

Eceonomic sanctions remain in effect against property owners in flood prone areas, he said, and the mortgage loan sanction is still in effect for residents in those communities which are still in the flood insurance program.

"We think there's enough of the mortgage loan sanction intact to challenge the principal," he said.

As the law stands now, a resident in a community not in the flood program, cannot obtain flood insurance and can expect no federal financial help if his property is flooded.

In those communities which have joined the program, some property owners feel they are in equally bad shape.

The program designates areas prone to flooding and requires that structures be built above the 100 year flood level. It also designates floodways and bans all construction within those areas. Sikeston has floodways along its drainage ditches.

The coalition says the flood insurance program takes away the use of property without compensation.

The law has left some property owners with land they say which they can neither dispose of nor develop.

Proceeds of the sale will go toward the building of the new Cerebral Palsy Center in Sikeston.

Lloyd Stoner, Jaycee Boothee! Rodeo Chairman; Jim Clay, Cerebral Palsy board member; and Gene Aufdenberg of Sikeston are working to m ake arrangements for the transportation and sale of the stallion.

Rogers stated in his discussions with the Sikeston Jaycees, "The development of the physically and mentally handicapped deserves our closest attention. It gives me much personal satisfaction to be able to make this contribution to an organization not federally or state funded, and I sincerely appreciate the work of the Jaycees in making the opportunity available.

"I feel confident that the great Sikeston community and surrounding area will get behind our project to assure the new Cerebral Palsy Center will become a reality."

Each year, Rogers hosts and produces a celebrity softball game in Las Vegas, Nev., whichraises thousands of dollars for the Special Olympics for the mentally retarded. The Sikeston project fits hand-in- hand with the "charitable activities which this fine humanitarian, gentleman and star performer has conducted for several years," Jaycees said.

Plans were made known earlier this week by the Scott-Mississippi- New Madrid Counties United Cerebral Palsy Board to construct a 5,000 square foot Children's Therapy Center.

Although the site of the building has not been announced, action is being taken by Weber Gilmore, a Sikeston attorney and cerebral palsy board member, to have it constructed near the area of the New Dawn State School on Glenn Drive.

The building, which is being designed by Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes of Sikeston, will be erected in Kenny Rogers name. This move was made by the cerebral palsy board meeting Wednesday, following the announcement of the contribution.

The decision was related to the performer in a telephone conversation by Sikeston Jaycee President Charles Stamp Jr., following the artist's appearance on NBC's Today Show on Thursday morning.

Rogers replied, "I expected no such honor. I am truly humbled. Please pass on my sincere appreciation to the Association and to the entire community."

The building is being geared to the handicapped with five-feet hallways, four-foot doorways and no stairs. The new center will house a kitchen, office, private physical therapy room, main therapy room, utility room, speech therapy room, parent conference room, five bathrooms, whirlpool room, garage, full basement and storage area.

should be kept as a historical site and possibly look for another location.

The building is one of the oldest in Benton and formerly housed the Scott County Kicker Newspaper and a rooming house for jurors.

The county court earlier this year applied for federal money to construct the new magistrate court building and originally had been awarded a grant of approximately $125,000, but then discovered more money might be available if they re-applied to include other federally approved projects.

After re-submitting their application the county was awarded $429,000. The added projects include renovation of the present courthouse including repairing the pillars and installing storm windows and air-conditioning and renovation on the county highway building including installing a ceiling, building a storage building for equipment and creating two offices.

The grant, made available through the Economic Development Administration, is part of an economic stimulus program.

With the acceptance of the grant, the county agreed to have the program under contract within 90 days of Sept. 26.

Waters told the court that leaves only 73 days before contractors must be starting work.

In other business, Fred Glover of the Scott County Juvenile Department reported to the court that liability insurance coverage for the juvenile officers is due to be renewed by Nov. 1.

Glover said the cost of the insurance coverage has been running $65 per year for each officer through the Missouri Sheriff's Association but that he has received a letter saying the coverage willmpw cpst $194.70 per officer for the coming year.

He added this additional expense has not been figured in the budget and asked the court what they will allow additional money over the budget.

The county court asked Glover if he knew what the legislature was going to allow for juvenile services in the coming year. Glover said he did not know at this time.

After further discussion the court said they would pay an additional $400 for the liability insurance to have a total of three officers covered. Glover said the other officer could be used in the office for present time.

Matthews -- J.R. King made a business trip to Cairo Sunday.

Corn is the king in the Sikeston district this year. Not only is the acreage the largest ever known here, but the yield also was never equalled before.

Effective November 2nd next, there will be an increase in first-class postal rates. Letters will require three cents postage if their destination is beyond the service of the local office. Drop letters will remain at two cents. Postal cards must bear two cent stamps.

The Sikeston Bulldogs will play their first football game of the season on the local high school field at 1:30 this afternoon. Malden High School is the opponent. At a meeting of the team held yesterday Ned was elected captain for the year. Will Harper of Bertrand, a former Missouri Tiger, will referee the game.

The following Sikeston boys available for this afternoon's contest: Wade Malcolm, Pleas Malcolm, Ned Tanner, Jackson Milem, Allen Franklin, Lannis Comer, Marvin Burton, Harold Lindley, Virgil Randolph, Gus Wainman, Milem Limbaugh, Lewis Emory Baker, Willard Shain, Craven Watkins, Don Vowels, and Paul Witt.

The work of paving Malone avenue is progressing. Unless winter comes earlier than usual, it is likdely the street will be finished this year. The new street is very narrow for the entire length of Malone, being only 20 feet wide. This, however, is all of the space available between the Missouri Pacific right-of-way and the curb line on the south side of the street.

What's the law?

First husband is test tube father

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

For Marty, marriage was an institution where his joys were divided and his troubles multiplied. His biggest woe, however, evolved because he couldn't have children. After Marty consented to his wife's having a baby by artificial insemination, she gave birth to a son and then divorced Marty. And, if that wasn't upsetting enough, his erstwhile wife and her second husband wanted to adopt "his" child who had become his pride and happiness.

"Enough is enough," Marty protested in court. "Under the law in this state, a parent's consent is required for an adoption and, as father of my son, I won't give it."

"He's gotta' be joking," responded Marty's former wife. "He's not the father. The father was a test tube . .. with a third party doner. He had no more to do with the birth of my son than the mailman."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the adoption without beleaquered consent?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a child born after artificial insemination of a wife by a third party doner, with the consent of her husband during a valid marriage, is deemed a child of the marriage. And, concluded the judge, since Marty is considered the lawful parent of that child, his consent is required, by statute, prior to an adoption.

4 injured in traffic accidents

Four persons received minor injuries in traffic accidents Thursday evening and early this morning on area roads, the highway patrol reported today.

A Dudley Youth, Tony Don Clark, 18, of Route One driver of the southbound car, and two passengers Dale E. McClure, 16, and Catherine Anne Huebmer, 19, both of Puxico Route One, received minor injuries in an accident at 3:20 a.m. today on a gravel road three miles northeast of Puxico.

The patrol said the accident occurred when the southbound car traveling, at a high rate of speed, failed to make a curve, ran off the road and struck a tree.

Clark was arrested for careless and imprudent driving.

All of the injured were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A Sikeston youth received minor injuries while a passenger in a car driven by another youth, a runaway from the Sears Youth Center in Poplar Bluff - while the car was being pursued by highway patrolman George Harris.

The accident occured at 5:40 p.m. Thursday at the junctions of South Prairie and Edmonds Streets as the youth's car being pursued south on Prairie for running a stop sign, refused to stop and made a wide left turn and struck a utility pole.

The driver was arrested for underage operator, and for failure to exercise high degree of caution.

The injured youth was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital, by the Sikeston Public Safety Department. Both youths were minors and their names were not given.

Rape case hearing set Oct. 20

CARUTHERSVILLE — A preliminary hearing for 29-year-old Bill Rogers Jr. of Hayti has been set for Oct. 20 in Pemiscot County Magistrate Court on charges from the rape of an 85-year-old Hayti woman.

Rogers, who reportedly was employed by the victim to mow her yard, is accused of raping the elderly woman at her Hayti home in the early morning hours of October 1. He allegedly threatened the woman with a knife when she answered the door and then forced her into the bedroom, where the rape allegedly occurred.

Rogers appeared before Magistrate Sidney Chaffin for arraignment last week and requested the hearing. He is being held in lieu of a $15,000 bond.

Vending machine is stolen

A soft drink vending maching and a citizen band radio were reported stolen and a business was burglarized, according to the Public Safety Department.

A Coca Cola vending machine and its contents were stolen between 5:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday from the north side of the Bunny Bread plant, 1405 W. Malone Ave.

The vending machine, which weighed between 300 and 500 pounds was loaded on a truck and removed. The loss was put at $100.

Burglars took about $50 in money and a pocket calculator worth about $22 from Interstate Flooring Distributors, 214 S. Ingram St.

Belinda Gail Wren, 223 N. Frisco St., reported the theft of a CB radio worth $60 from car while it was parked at her home between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 5 a.m. Thursday.

Living On Three Levels

1542 SQ. FT. LIVING AREA

MODEL BC1542

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

More than 1,800 square feet of living space is provided by this house when the family room behind the garage on its lower level is included in the count. Note how tidily this plan adapts to uneven ground contours, utilizing them for both practicality and extra charm.

Steps lead up to the double door main entrance and a central entry just inside carefully channels traffic in an efficient manner to all levels of the house. The large comfortable living room, complete with fireplace and big picture window has a wide view of the separate dining room at the rear, for an even greater feeling of spaciousness.

The back of the house kitchen has a convenient modified U-shaped work area with plenty of counter and cabinet space and a dining counter too. Sliding doors give access to the rear of the lot and stairs lead from here to the lower level family room and garage.

On this lower floor the double garage is backed up to a big family room, and a bath and a utility room with storage area and laundry facilities are also included.

On the uppermost level, reached by another flight of stairs from the central entry on the main floor, there are three good, big bedrooms and two full baths, plus plenty of very adequate closets, including a walk-in model in the master bedroom. Note that these back to back baths are also in line with the bath and laundry on the lower level to insure maximum economy in plumbing installation.

Plants and Patio

1731 SQ. FT. LIVING AREA

MODEL C1731

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

There is a certain air of cozy welcome apparent even before entering this big, attractive ranch style house and it may spring from just such little touches as that plant shelf on the wall below the bedroom windows.

Then again, there is undeniable living pleasure in the long, rear covered patio, fit snugly into the basic lines of the house itself. Enclosed on two sides by the house, and on a third by the garage, this highly useful outdoor living area not only increases the livability of the family room but also has a handy door to the big two car garage and the laundry facilities located there.

Now, consider that family room more closely. It is, in effect, part of a tremendous country style kitchen, for the two areas are separated only by floor to counter cabinets and a convenient dining counter. Note, too, its fireplace, actually a second opening from the chimney unit which provides a living room fireplace also. The kitchen work area covers almost all of four walls, thus giving the ultimate amount of storage and work space and there is a kitchen door to the garage, too, for extra convenience. And, do not overlook the small, but practical pantry.

At the front of the house, a semi separate entry keeps the living room totally private and channels traffic efficiently to the rear living areas or to the bedrooms at the left of the house.

There are three of these, the master bedroom being specially noteworthy with its bath, dressing room, linen closet and triple clothes closets. The other two bedrooms are also well designed in regard both to size and closet space.

A lot of imaginative designing skill has produced here a house which has both the basic and the extras needed to provide living pleasure day in and day out.
